So what's new?

Mr. Shepler on his bullhorn. Students walking in from their cars and buses. Stories being told in the hallways about events from the summer. The commons packed with students reuniting. Yes, it seemed to be your typical first day at Warren Central. But unbeknownst to most, it was not because administration, classes, and clubs had all taken a new direction.

Let's start off with the most major. After serving as principal of the Freshman Academy for three years, Mr. Rich Shepler moved his way up to Warren Central's principal. He had worked in Warren Township for more than 15 years, as well as graduated from the high school, so it was definitely due time for his position. Filling his role as freshman principal was former assistant, Mr. Marques Clayton. Former English teacher Ms. Emily Brown moved over to become Mr. Clayton's assistant.

After leading the school for nine years, Mr. Burchett established his spot as assistant superintendent of the township. But no worries, although his new office was relocated to 975 North Post Road, he could often be found checking in on the school and students he grew to love.

Other changes were not ones that the students favored, but ones that were established for the betterment of the school's education process such as the new attendance policy and a more strictly enforced dress code and electronics policy.

Twelve. This number was repeated over and over during the first weeks of school. It stood for the 12 excused and unexcused absences that could result in a credit denial for a class. Dressing appropriately and the absence of electronic devices was also stressed. Students caught not following these rules were sent into intervention for the rest of the day. (Continuation on page 4)

The Other Rules

- Students were not allowed to walk outside to get to the Walker Career Center during passing period.
- When late to school, students no longer had to sign in to a late table but were sent directly to class where lates were recorded.
- Taking the place of Friday school and detentions were Saturday school hours.

On a lighter note, the school made exciting additions with new teachers, clubs, and classes. Replacing "Fun Monkey" was the new club "Comedy Sports," an improvisation team that competed against other high school teams. HOPE (Helping Other People Everywhere), a charity organization that was designed to help people locally and nationally started by Spanish teacher Mr. Gomez, also emerged this year and helped over 70 families.

Biomedical Studies, an in-depth look at the way different body systems work, was added, as well as Theater History. Over 20 new faculty members joined our "Warrior Nation." As far as academics goes, the entire school adopted the "100-95" grading scale and EdTracker finally became completely available to teachers and parents.

As far a big achievements go, Warren had its share. For the first time, a Warren Central senior Bianca Wright won the Miss Circle City Classic pageant, a contest for African American females to display their personal and professional skills. As usual, Huddle Up Against Hunger made an outstanding impact, but this time raising over 40,000 cans in order to serve needy families in Warren Township.

Yes, changing directions. This was the motivation for the school year. It helped develop new standards and raised the bar with new additions, and it continued with the positive outlook of even better changes along the way.

Homecoming

Events bring record breaking numbers

What a year it was for the student council sponsored Homecoming Week. With a record setting number of tickets sold for most events, this was in fact one of the most successful Homecoming weeks in school history.

With a hectic week of finding fishnets, different color shoes laces, Disney shirts, paint, an outfit to wear to Star Search and Starbucks to take to the bonfire, it was debated by the upper classman if the participation by the underclassman would continue over to Saturday's Homecoming Dance. Turns out in deed it did, as the Homecoming Dance was in fact the most attended ever.

A collaboration of decorations ranging from a football goal, a giant scoreboard, clear lights and a giant football player arch created perfect dance theme after knocking off number one ranked Center Grove. The hype from defeating the Trojans of Center Grove seemed to carry over to the dance as students from all grades joined together to form mash pits, trains and a larger than life display of Soulja Boy's hit song "Crank that Soulja Boy."

Midway through the dance, the tradition of announcing court members was kept alive as students gathered around the balcony to cheer on Natalie Daniels and Anthony Weather as they were announced King and Queen.

Ending the night, "I'll Be" by Edwain McCain played as students flocked to the cafeteria to retrieve items held by the Warren Dads.

Student Council members stayed behind to tear down highly talked about football decorations, wrap up Christmas lights, pick up trash and an assortment of items dropped throughout the night.

Memories and highlights from one of the most amazing Homecoming weeks in school history were still talked about days after the week had concluded.

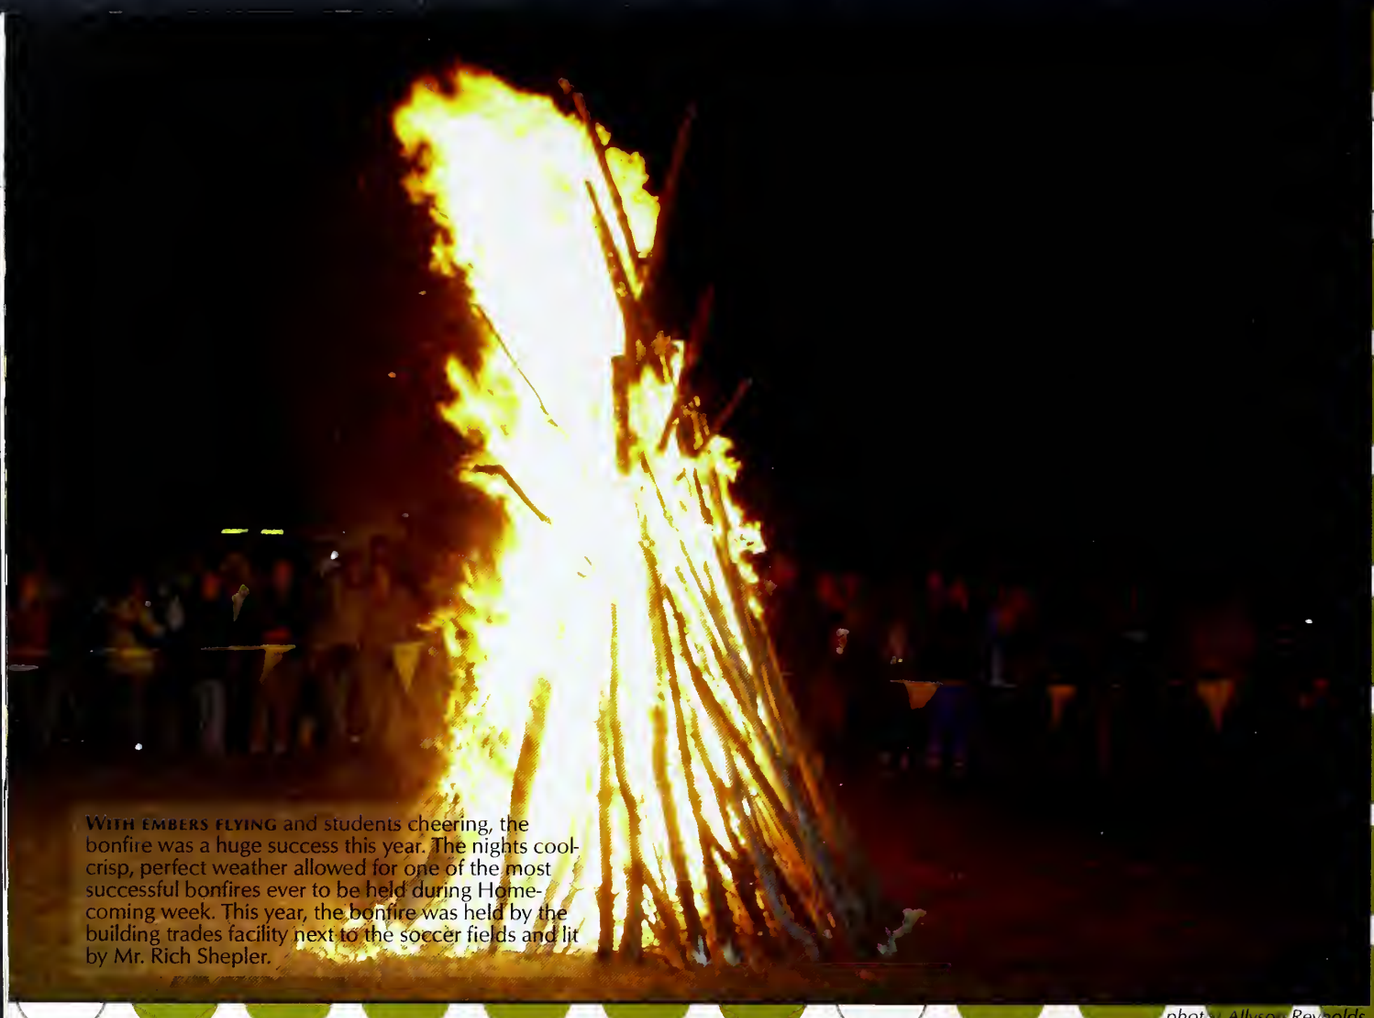
The traditional singing of the school song was put into action by a gathering of football players, cheerleaders, trainers and coaches after defeating the number one ranked Trojans from Center Grove. The game was one of the most anticipated games of the year, and the celebration after a homecoming victory was a huge highlight during the football season.



With embers flying and students cheering, the bonfire was a huge success this year. The nights cool-crisp, perfect weather allowed for one of the most successful bonfires ever to be held during Homecoming week. This year, the bonfire was held by the building trades facility next to the soccer fields and lit by Mr. Rich Shepler.

DRESS UP DAYS

GUEST SPEAKER TED Wiese put a "Canadian Newt" into Shennea Dixon's hand. He taught students who attended the leadership retreat that overcoming fear shaped better leaders.

Leadership

A bend in the road is not the end of the road.

Some 100 students packed three buses at 7:40 a.m. after a long week of anticipating the annual leadership retreat on a cold Thursday morning.

Minutes after arriving, students were already standing up playing a game of "Simon Says" before getting a chance to complain about the weather.

Guest speaker Ted Wiese immediately got students in the mood to learn and participate in what the day would bring.

Wiese started the annual leadership retreat off by choosing three student leaders: Shennea Dixon, Kristin Byrd, and Bianca Wright. He then blindfolded them and placed a "Canadian newt" into each of their hands.

Immediately after placing the "newt" into Bianca's hand, she ran, screamed, and immediately threw the "newt" down on the ground. Kristin and Shennea faced their fear and held the "newt." Shennea was determined enough to eat it. The remaining student leaders watching laughed because they knew that the so-called "Canadian newt" was really just a gummy worm soaked in water.

Guest speaker Wiese also had students play several different trust games to show them that relying on others can help one become a better leader.

"The leadership retreat is a once a year opportunity for Warren Central's top student leaders," advisor Beth Wolff said. "All paths of the school can come together and get started on their personal leadership path."

"It was cool to watch everyone helping each other and working together when we were playing the circle of trust game," junior Jacob Aldrich said.

One activity had students close their eyes and trust others to lead one another around the camp without running them into anything. Another activity consisted of 3 stages of leadership: an egg, a chicken, a dinosaur, and a leader. The point of the game was to become a leader by beating three people consecutively in rock-paper-scissors. After becoming a leader, the goal was to help everyone else to become a leader. No one was to be left as an egg, a chicken or a dinosaur.

The overall theme of the leadership retreat was trust. Students were taught to trust others to lead them in the right direction, whether they were being led up the stairs with their eyes closed by another student or if they were stuck as an egg trying to become a leader.

"The leadership retreat is an invaluable experience that most schools do not offer," Wolff said.

Pippin

Forget what you thought about musicals

The stage is lit and the band of players is ready for the curtain to rise as the final performance of Pippin begins.The energy and anticipation is close to busting through the seams of the PAC. Parents and students alike are awaiting th e action packed performance. A few actors begin to transform into their characters before taking their place for Act 1, Scene 1, "Pippin" is ready to begin.

Everyone knows that the Warren Drama Department is anything but ordinary and most recently has had a string of major success with elaborate and challenging plays. "Pippin" definitely fit into those classifications.

"Aida was such a big success and we wanted to pick something different and 'Pippin' was definitely different," Director Mr. Gabe Huddleston said.

Pippin was not your run-of-the-mill musical, in that it was a lively story of the formatted outline that most musicals are written for. Huddleston was put up to the task of selecting people that had the "triple threat"- being able to sing, dance, and act at the same time with same level of excellence. Audience members also noticed a few fresh faces to take the stage like junior Brook Wood, junior Ignoisco Miles, and sophomore Logan Moore. Pippin was also the first for a few of the chorus members.

"It was my first musical, and I had no idea that I could sing or dance, but I was definitely proven wrong!" junior Adam Young said.

The creative tale begins with what appears to be a typical musical with a pointless plot and random singing and dancing. During the second act the plot takes an unexspected turn as the moral of the story is revealed, and it certainly is not what anyone expected.

Through the frustration of getting everyone and everything together, Pippin took its spot in the PAC's long list of successful plays and musicals. The cast, crew and audience can validate that Pippin was nothing short of magical.

"I was so proud of the fact that we were able to do something so different that people liked,"Huddleston said.

The Servant of Two Masters

An old play takes a fresh take with a new director

A small group of 14 performers took on a massive play. The task at hand was commedia del arte that required a lot of falling and a lot of masks. "Servant of Two Masters" took center stage with not only laughs guaranteed but also a new director in the director chair, Ms. Carrie Reiberg.

Reiberg was ready to take on the challenge and was not going to stop at anything to produce true art and entertainment for the community. Casting began three months before the play was to take place and with many students, a lot of tough decisions had to be made because of the size of the small cast.

"I [illegible] the best people for the part, I did not have [illegible] Reiberg said when asked about who to cast in [illegible]

The cast list also had a few fresh faces for the stage. Ya[illegible] Stidelhalk and Brannon Bowers, both freshmen, stood [illegible] next to the upperclassman and did not hold anything back in their respected roles. As new faces took the stage, a few familiar faces bid their farewell. Seniors Kelsey Ping, Melinda Kashner and Tameca Montez all had an unforgettable last performance. The cast was the perfect ensemble, each person held their own character, and the chemistry amongst the cast generated laugh after laugh.

Although "Servant of Two Masters" was an old play, Reiberg and the cast took a fresh take on the play. The costumes and masks were traditional comedia del arte, but nonetheless it was still entertaining and something that everyone could enjoy without a knowledge of ancient theatre.

"Servant of Two Masters" is about two long lost lovers who hire the same master and find each other through the process. Of course, the plot gets twisted when people do not appear to be what they truly are, and matters do not help much when food is always on the servant's mind. It is comedic gold.

The main goal of Reiberg and the cast was to produce a great production and the playgoers agreed. The energy from the stage spread into the audience, literally. Some scenes spilled over into the audience as sword fights were taking place up the aisles.

It was a first, but certainly not a last for Reiberg, and the small, yet mighty cast pulled together, and the product was a great production that will go down in PAC history.

Pride and Prejudice

A story of love, despair, hope, rejection and joy

The stage was simple and the costumes were elegant, as actors and actresses danced together performing the long awaited play, "Pride and Prejudice," a humorous romance novel written by author Jane Austen.

The play revolved around the Bennet family, an obscure family with five daughters hoping to save their name by marrying their daughters into wealth. Sophomore Miranda Nehrig made her debut on stage playing a charming and clever Elizabeth Bennet, who falls in love with Mr. Darcy, played by senior Kadeem Goddard.

The love story strengthened and fell throughout the play. Elizabeth even denied his hand in marriage because of his conceited and prideful nature, but only to make him a better person. As their love story endured, so did Jane's, another Bennet sister, played by junior Liz Presley. Jane fell immediately in love with Mr. Bingley, played by junior Michael Murphy.

Both of the couples seemed to have a chaotic story of denial and somewhat forbidden love, but in the end everyone was happy, even Mr. and Mrs. Bennet, played by English teacher Mr. Richard Reed and art teacher Dr. Sally Rice, who lived in peace knowing that two of their daughters married into wealth and kept the family name going.

With a big cast of 25 spending what seemed to be endless hours together, the cast really became a family so it was not difficult for them to get into character, making the show a personal experience for the audience.

"We spent so much time working and perfecting our performance, that it seemed like we were always part of the Bennet family and all of the drama that went along with being involved with the family," said senior Mykal Thomas, who played George Wickham.

"Pride and Prejudice" was a big hit, selling out all four nights of the show and providing the audience with laughter and tears.

Prom

In your eyes I am complete

Prom has been and will always be a highly anticipated event of any school year. This year, the anticipation and long wait proved worthy.

Jammed packed with music, people, food and decorations the Indiana Roof Ballroom was definently the place to be on April 26.

With the colors of black and white and the theme of "In Your Eyes", the prom definently earned the status of the "best dance of the year."

The night started off at 6:30 with catering by the ballroom and soft classical music lingering in the backround. As the majority of guest began arriving around 8:00 the dance floor definently picked up pace with dances lines, couple dances and mosh pits.

Midway through, guest were treated with a array of lights and thunder, simulating a thunder storm, in the ceiling of the ballroom where prom court was announced.

After votes were counted, Will Prim and Lauren Shepherd won the vote and were crowned as King and Queen. After Will was crowned by Maria Watson, Prom Queen from 2007, and Lauren by Brad Ellington, King from 2007, Lauren and Will lead everyone in a dance to the theme based song "In Your Eyes" by Peter Gabriel.

As the night wound down and the final dance was played, students flocked to the front desk of the ballroom to pick up held items. Although an amusement park line formed at the front desk, nothing but smiles and laughter could be seen on Washington Street as students headed into limos, carriages and sports cars to end the night.

Painting up was a huge must in the case of most sporting events during the year. Usually painted on the stomachs of the seniors, sayings such as "Slay the Giants" or "Hush the Puppies" helped get the crowd hyped and going. Around 15-20 students met before each game to paint an individual letter on their stomach or chest in helping to create a phrase for the particular team being played.

The path toward graduation started freshmen year and followed us for the next four. We spent countless hours on homework and studying for tests, earning those required 46 credits and passing numerous required courses and tests. After spending 3 days a week in crammed classrooms for 13 years, the moment has finally approached. Graduation.

Student Life

Some things never really change, they evolve. Like school spirit. Spirit is always a high school staple, but how students show it differs from year to year. Like the "Heady Hopefuls."

It is the night of the big Carmel game, and although the JV game hasn't even started, the high-spirited "Heady Hopefuls" are already in the front bleachers ready to deliver shouts, chants, and cheers. During the game, they yell out encouraging sayings to pump up the Warrior team as well as somewhat ruthless messages in order to distract the Carmel rivals. The game becomes more exciting as time elapses.

The fourth quarter nears and the scores are close. As the anticipation rises in the crowd, the game ends as a tie.

The "Heady Hopefuls" are pumped to continue cheering for another half. The game finally comes to an end with the Warriors winning 72-68, and the "Heady Hopefuls" end their night with screams, high-fives, and congratulatory remarks.

The "Heady Hopefuls," a mostly senior basketball fan group, came from the minds of seniors Josh Walker, Shaun Doerflein, and Joel Mathews, who believed that the basketball team had progressed and had better chances of winning, and that it needed a big, loyal, and completely spirited fan base to attend all games.

The 12-member fan group began after the second game of the season against Fishers, right before the match-up with Lawrence North. At the beginning of the Lawrence North game, Mathews ripped one of the opposing team's practice jerseys off of himself during the call of the starting line-up.

Although participating in the "Heady Hopefuls" was all for a good cause, being a true member was not cheap. Money was spent almost every week on game tickets, T-shirts, paint, leis, and banners. The group even spent money to travel to county with the team.

Game rituals were also part of the group's encouragement. When junior Ed "Big Ed" Hazelett stepped out onto the court, the entire group fell to the floor to emphasize his 6'6" stature. But not only did they pump up the Warrior team, they helped encourage Coach Scott Heady after an appendix surgery.

Those who had the chance to see the spirited "Heady Hopefuls" in action knew that these were a group of serious high school basketball fans. Their dedication was so strong that it made others wonder, "Am I a true fan?"

Seniors Chelsea Tuttle, Logan Worley, and Ashley Peek lead the "Heady Hopefuls" as they cheer on the Warriors in the big game against the Carmel Greyhounds. The "Heady Hopefuls" was a fan group formed to encourage school spirit at basketball games. photo/ Josh Walker

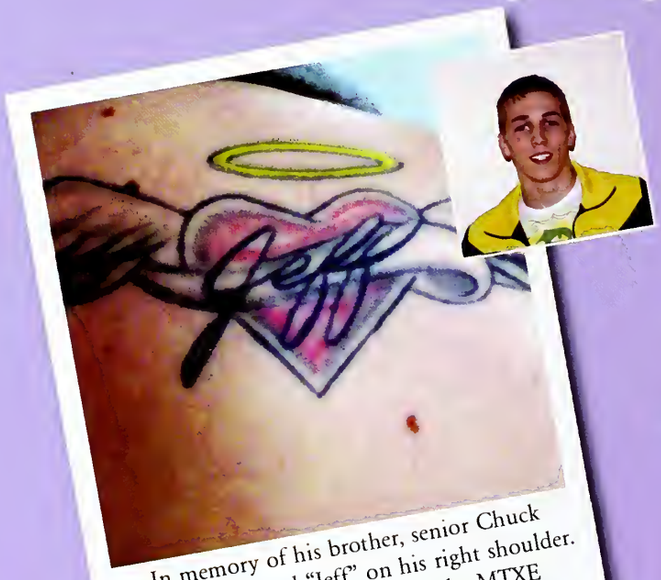
TATTOO

Tattoos are not only for sailors, students have now caught on in a way to express themselves.



In memory of his brother, senior Chuck Woodard tattooed "Jeff" on his right shoulder. Jeff's memory also inspired the MTXE campaign within the wrestling department.

Senior Zach May tattooed "Pray for Rain" in Hebrew on his right leg. The phrase, often said by his grandfather, meant to be prepared for anything that may come.

Senior Emily Gambino tattooed "Hope" in pink letters on her right wrist. The tattoo represented "hope for breast cancer" for a loved one.

As her first tattoo, senior Cassie Davidson tattooed the motto "Love, Live, Life" on her lower neck. "I wanted this as my first tattoo because it's the motto I live by everyday."

The story behind the tattoo...

Sisters are difficult to find, hard to leave, and impossible to forget.

"Sisters are difficult to find, hard to leave, and impossible to forget." This was the phrase tattooed on senior Brooke Robbins' side. It was not your typical tattoo though, brought on by a burst of bravery on an 18th birthday or on the spur of the moment during a wild spring break; it had true meaning.

For years, Robbins had known that she had a sister but did not know her true whereabouts. Right before spring break, Robbins' cousin had been casually searching the Internet. By pure surprise, she found Robbins' sister while on MySpace. From there, Robbins and her sister exchanged information and began learning about one another.

Instead of taking a trip to Florida or going on a family cruise during spring break like other seniors, Robbins flew to Peoria, Arizona, to meet her 20-year-old sister Brittaney for the first time.

"When we first met, it felt really weird, like it wasn't real," Robbins said. Spending their week together, they learned about one another. "We are both severely tone deaf, and we have the exact same smile. She just has blonde hair and blue eyes while mine are both brown," Robbins said.

After the week of spring break, it was time for Robbins to come back home to Indiana. "It was really difficult leaving because we had grown so close just from our week spent together," Robbins said. So in order to stay connected, they decided they wanted something permanent that would last forever.

The two sisters went to a tattoo expo to get the phrase "sisters are difficult to find, hard to leave, and impossible to forget" which they happened to find while there. "We got the tattoos so that we would both have something in common that would keep us connected," Robbins said.

Brooke and her sister Brittaney now have plans to keep in touch more often. Over the summer, Robbins' sister plans to visit Indiana. "Now that I've visited her, she's going to come here so that she can meet the rest of the family that is excited to meet her," Robbins said.

Some people may get tattoos just for the sake of turning 18, and others may get them to represent a deep meaning. For Brooke Robbins, it did just that. It linked her to her long-lost sister that she never imagined meeting.

think globally, act locally

Bold patterns, high rise pants, and the newsboy cap were not the latest fashion trends at Warren Central. Fashion-lovers and Environmentalists alike added to their swanky wardrobe, not with the hottest trends but with products and tips that cool down the Earth. Students were going green.

"Going green" is a phenomenon that swept the nation and did not stop at Warren Central, rather made its home in the heart of Warriors. Environmental awareness caught the interest of the student body, but there were two particular students who knew that something had to be done and took it upon themselves to make a change.

Take two determined seniors, one principal who was willing to work with the students, a lot of hard work, and a little luck and the outcome was a change in the way Warren recycled. Kelsey Ping and Afifa Irani both recognized that the daily waste at Warren was excessive and was something that could change with the work of more people. The two began to develop their plan of action and soon realized that it would take more manpower so they took their ideas straight to the top, Mr. Rich Shepler.

This trio began to develop their idea into something that could be accomplished and would really make an impact. When looking at the cafeteria they soon realized that 700 cardboard boxes were being thrown away everyday along with the thousands of plastic bottles and other recyclable materials. Mr. Justin Hawkins, the director of Chartwells, joined their crusade to recycle.

What happened next was the fuel that got the engine going. A new recycling plan was discussed, the only problem was that Warren's trash pick-up at the time, did not offer a recycling program, which meant that a new service would be needed. Ray's Trash service came into the picture and struck a deal that would allow them to pick up Warren's trash and recyclables. A special dumpster was put at the pick up location. This idea to make a change started to become a reality thanks to the efforts of several people.

Things only got better after that, over the holiday break the east cafeteria was renovated. Students came back to new booths, bigger tables, and more chairs, but the thing that was the biggest surprise was the new recycling cans that were placed in the aisle and between the tables.

It only took two students to make a change that made a difference. Students found that saving the environment did not take a superhero, rather determination.

A Friend of the Enviroment

Jacob Aldrich

It does not take a lot to make a difference in the enviroment, but some have found it to be their duty to change the world for the better. One of these earth-lovers is junior Jacob Aldrich. Aldrich grew up learning to appreticate the enviroment and has learned to see its natural beauty. Anyone can reuse a water bottle or flip a light switch, but it takes true dedication to limit the use of automobiles. Since Jacob only lives down the street from the school, he is able to walk or ride his bike to school every day, cutting down on carbon monoxide fumes that seriously damage the earth. "When I was young, it was never out of the ordinary for my parents to find me at the top of a tree. Ever since then, I have done my best to protect the enviroment!"

Mr. Dan Henn

From an early age, Dan Henn was concerned about the environment, and as he grew up he became more aware of the environmental challenges that the world faces today. Both Henn and his wife have suited their lives in an effort to do what they can for the environment. It started with just recycling old newspapers, glass, aluminum, and plastic and even purchasing a mulching mower that provides nutrients to the grass and eliminates bagging grass clippings. At the Henn household the windows have been replaced with energy efficient windows. Henn and his wife share a Prius because of its gas efficiency not only saving money but also the environment. "If everyone would just do a little we as a society would be in a better place."

Green Around Warren

Mr. Nick Salemi

Room H206 was not only the classroom for International Relations but doubled as the recycling headquarters for Warren. Student's flooded into Mr. Salemi's room to deposit their empty bottles, old quizzes, and newspapers. Trashbags and bins inhabited the room everyday.

Mr. Dave Prevost

Inside Mr. Prevost's room all of the computers may catch one's eye but the giant red bin that was filled with big cardboard boxes and used photo paper tended to grab one's attention. Next to a red bin was the blue bin for plastic bottles. Students were able to not only dispose of their papers used for graphic imaging but also ditch their soda bottles.

Facebook

The popular site Facebook did their share in saving the enviroment. Members of the social network were able to show their going green techinques with several applications that can be added to anyone's page such as the "I am Green" application.

Recycling Bins

When the east cafeteria was remodled over the holiday break, the new booths were not the only thing that students noticed, but also the recycling bins. Bins were located througout the aisles and beside tables giving students easy access.

The Heart of a Warrior

In the Soul of Every Person Lies a Warrior

"Rah Rah for Warren, Warren will win, fight to the finish never give in..." anyone who is anyone knows the Warrior anthem by heart and sings it proudly with every Warrior win, which seems to happen more often than not. So what happens when the undefeated finda themselves defeated? A true Warrior knows the answer to this.

From the months of September to November, everyone's Friday is booked with none other than the Friday Night Football game and usually a trip to a fast-food restaurant afterwards. The stadium lights burned bright under the roaring crowd, who were eagerly awaiting a Warrior win. The student section is filled with black and gold and decorated bodies of seniors whose painted stomachs display their spirit with "Lets Go Warriors". Luckily for "this little town of ours" it was more often than not that the crowd was gloating after the game because once again, the Warriors had taken another "W" for their record.

With the end of Friday night, the next one was already in the works. Seniors gathered their crew that would paint their bodies in hopes of a win, even in freezing temperatures. These messages to the opponent were not only intimidating, but also clever.

For the past what seems like forever, Warren Central has been known for State Title after State Title, a regime of successful seasons. It seemed like the entire nation was aware of Warren Central High School and knew that the Warriors were a force to be reckoned with, this era of good feeling seemed to makes its home in the heart of every Warrior. But everyone knows that "what goes up must come down" and a true test of dedication would be soon makes its way to "this town of ours."

The Warren Central Football team was heading for its fifth straight State Championship when the dreams and aspirations of the Warriors were cut short when the Hamilton Southeastern Royals defeated the Warriors with a score of 31-10, stopping them from making history. The football team and fans alike were shocked as the news quickly spread that the impossible had happened, the Warriors had been defeated.

After a serious blow to the morale, most fans would of give in, call it quits, and lose faith in the team they once loved. Warrior fans were not most people and certainly would not give up, did not call it quits and never lost faith in their team. Within an hour of the defeat they were eager for revenge next year and promised to never give up.

As football season ended, a new wave of spirit began to sweep the Warrior Nation, basketball. The basketball season promised to be an unforgettable one and one group of students caught on to this, the Heady Hopefuls. This group of students busted our their Warrior gear and claimed their territory in the front bleachers as they cheered on their Warriors to nuemrous victories.

The highlight of the basketball season was when the Warriors faced the top-raked Carmel Greyhounds. For weeks everyone was anxiously awaiting this game and prepartions for spirit attire was already in the works. When game day arrived the fans cheered on the team to a much deserved win aganist Carmel.

Students and staff proved that it did not matter the sport they were cheering for or how the season ended, all that mattered was being there for the Warriors, through the good and the bad.

Everlasting Love

Remember those Disney princess movies? The timeless classics that show a prince on a white horse, and a passionate kiss upon discovering his long sought after princess.

This romantic gesture is every girl's childhood dream, to be swept off her feet and taken away by her Prince Charming.

A few Warren couples feel this childhood dream has become a reality, and it appears that these couples will be everlasting.

In the high school dating world, it is considered normal if a new couple lasts around four months and remarkable if they last a year.

But in the case of senior Danielle Everts and junior Tyler New, this fairy tale has lasted two years, and the possibility of a lifetime is definitely there.

"Tyler and I work because we balance each other. We are the typical opposites attract couple," Danielle said.

Tyler and Danielle met in 2006, and have been going strong ever since. They balance spending time with each other with jammed-pack schedules by making simple arrangements such as working on each other's cars and even going grocery shopping with one another.

"We're a very silly couple. We enjoy playing video games or can be happy just sitting on the couch watching one of our favorite movies. For some reason he really likes Jay and Silent Bob, and we seem to watch this movie a lot."

Danielle Everts & Tyler New
June 9, 2006

Danielle and Tyler appear to be the perfect item. Yes, they have had their typical "battles" as a maturing couple, but they are always there for each other, whether helping to pay each other's bills or just being there when the other needs support.

Danielle and Tyler's relationship appears strong for the future. They have made plans on living with each other in the future, and a promise of marriage has been put into place.

Danielle and Tyler are the perfect image of what an everlasting high school couple looks like. They have an extremely strong bond, and do not let petty high school drama interfere with the love they have for one another.

Perfect high school couples could happen. It just took a lot of dedication and patience as well as finding a balance with the struggles of everyday high school life.

Finding a perfect fairy tale can happen, and Danielle and Tyler are living proof. Proof that a Disney cartoon can be brought to life, and that a "happily ever after ending" is just a few bad apples away.

These two family theme parks have always been a fun-filled place that allowed for a whole day of bonding as well as an adventure trying to find them.

Taking advantage of your sweetheart's favorite band or singer with surprise tickets to a concert was a great way to show your loved one you really know what he or she likes. Singing and dancing along during a special song was a great way to share that special unforgettable moment with your loved one. Ticket Master online was the most common way to keep track of local venues and artist.

Although this used to be a cheap hot spot, a movie was quite a pricey hangout place. After purchasing tickets, popcorn, drinks and candy, a movie definitely put a dent into one's wallet. On the upside, hot new releases were a great way to hold your loved one in your arms and after the movie, strike up a conversation over a cup of coffee.

KADEEM: Our relationship has and will last because we love each other and we really mean it. She is my other half and nothing in the world could change that. What else is there to say when you have found the perfect person.

JACKIE: Kadeem and I are extremely comfortable with each other. We have taught each other what it is like to not only be in love, but to be in love with the perfect person. The love and fun I have with him is just incomparable.

Local short change hangouts

price range $0-$10

A classic picnic during a nice summer day was a popular hang-out spot. A brunch full of fresh fruit, chips, sandwiches and a comfy blanket to sit on made for a great afternoon of talking and cuddling. Getting lost while taking a hike or bike ride along a trail is a great priceless bonding experience and scrap book moment.

A site-seeing walk along the canal or downtown skyline was always a romantic gesture. Besides a small parking fee and maybe some wearing out of the shoes, this was the inexpensive way to bring a couple closer. Downtown Indianapolis also had a lot of inexpensive museums, restaurants, fun outdoor activities like paddle boating and carriage rides to offer.

price range $0-$3

The couch has been and will always be the number one cheap hang-out spot. Renting a Blockbuster new release and grabbing a bowl of popcorn was a stess, worry free bonding experience. If there wasn't enough room for the both of you, grabbing a few pillows and blankets and placing it in the living room floor allowed for more room, and the possibility of avoiding that "you're in my space" argument.

The Zoo was a great couple hangout. There is just something about looking at cute furry animals and watching dolphins do flips that seems to bring a couple closer together. Sharing Dippin Dots while ridding the train around the Zoo was also a cute stress free opportunity.

Activities

Something as simple as a small bead plus determined teachers and students was all that it took to make a difference and help change the world.

An array of vibrant colors and the unique, bumpy texture, classified these oval-shaped beads as unusual; they certainly weren't average chocolate-coated treats typically sold as fundraiser items.

Mrs. Julia Oblon, along with her daughter Rachel Oblon, extended helping hands way beyond the local community; they made a difference miles away in Uganda.

The people of Uganda as well as Oblon's daughter used their creative skills to string together necklaces and bracelets of eye-catching, unusual oval-shaped beads. Each piece of handcrafted jewelry possessed its own color pattern.

Oblon and her calculus class got inspired to help after hearing stories from Oblon's daughter Rachel, who was working with people in Uganda. Shipped to Oblon straight from Uganda, the necklaces, bracelets, and earrings were sold at Warren throughout homefest, lunch, and in Oblon's classroom.

The prices of the jewelry differed depending on what students purchased. Earrings were the cheapest item, costing $2, bracelets cost $3, short necklaces were $5, and long necklaces cost $8. All proceeds from necklaces and bracelets sold at Warren were handed over to the hard-working hands of the Uganda jewelry makers.

People in Uganda not only appreciated and deserved all of the cash; they used it as a weapon in the never-ending battle against AIDS. The money was helpful in purchasing medication for the incurable disease.

With this random act of kindness not only did Oblon help the people of Uganda but she also taught students that if something starts tilting towards a crooked direction, they have the power to take control and change directions.

"The best thing about selling the jewelry was that it was all student driven," Oblon said. "I know that as one individual, my influence can only make a small difference, but when 20 kids get inspired, it makes a huge difference, a $5,000 difference."

Making a Difference.

Several activities, events, and policies have changed directions this year. However, the only direction Student Council steered near was success.

With 91 new members, Student Council kept advancing in size, as well as achievements in the community and Warrior Nation.

During Winterfest, officers got Warrior fans hyped as they brought back the pep rally. Being the first pep rally in many years, it attracted several teachers and students.

Senior students played an intense basketball game versus the boys' varsity basketball team.

Of course, the cheerleaders attended the pep rally to help hype the crowd.

Officers also mixed up the dress-up days for Winterfest week. Instead of just plain old mismatch day, there was boots and suits day. From sweatpants to dress pants, this dress-up day was a hit.

Creative costumes, bright make-up and clown noses, made circus day one of the most outrageous dress-up days yet. Mermaids and fish also made Under the Sea Day a huge success.

One of the greatest advancements for Student Council this year was Huddle Up Against Hunger, also referred to as H.U.A.H.

The council's goal was to collect 35,000 non-perishable canned-food items. With all the students and faculty who contributed cans, they exceeded their goal with a final count of 44,414 food items during the two week period. The school was awarded for surpassing the number of cans collected in order to achieve this year's goal.

"The best thing about Student Council this year has been doing so many social and service activities with 370 great kids," award-winning advisor Ms. Beth Wolff said.

Ready to Rumble!
Team members gather around to watch an intense robot battle. The Digital Goats named their robot Lynn.

photo/ Robotics

The Digital Goats.

Slimy, gruesome critters with wings and multiple pinchers usually cause high-pitched shrieks and annoyance. However, that wasn't the case for the Warrior Nation. The giant HEX bugs flying all around Warren weren't typical creepy-crawlers. Slimy, they were not, but instead colorful and voice-activated.

Available in the bookstore for ten dollars, these critters came in five different colors: blue, green, orange, red and yellow. The HEX bugs spread curiosity from student to student. The robotics team used them as a secret weapon to intrigue and lure people in; they also used them as fundraiser items. The proceeds helped pay for HEX kits used to build robots.

The Digital Goats is a title that seemed to fit the team perfectly. A mentor to the team just randomly threw it out as a joke and it stuck. It's clever and spunky like the team and their creations.

Lynn was just one of many robots built by the Digital Goats. Every year the team comes up with a new name for their creations; Lynn was named after mentor Mr. Randy Decker's wife, who had lung cancer. It took hours of work to build but it proved to be worth it.

During competitions, the robots were tested on their ability to pick up giant exercise balls.

Members spent a majority of their time working together to build the robot, adjusting the robot and rooting Lynn on at competitions.

20 members might seem like a lot, but when it came down to it, everyone was busy with their own job. From adjusting the robot, testing the robot, controlling it and supporting the team, there was never a dull moment.

"Our main goal was to raise money, build a robot and win competitions and awards," Digital Goats member Jessica Mickey said. The team achieved many of their goals as they won the Johnson and Johnson Gracious Award and earned an abundance of money during the HEX invasion.

Give a Little Hope.

It officially began September 25 in Mr. Francisco Gómez's small Spanish classroom. Nearly 50 future members filed into the room, finding open seats at desks and on the floor. Some who were interested came because they knew Gómez, others came because they had friends in the group, and some because they wanted to be apart of a club. But all shared a commonality that day, the thought of helping.

Helping Other People Everywhere, the acronym behind H.O.P.E, was the brainchild of Gómez, who left El Refugio, México, with his family at the age of six to begin his new life in America. His experiences helped inspire him to give something back to the community. The idea for H.O.P.E. arose after students and staff helped to raise money and goods to take to a children's hospital for terminally ill cancer patients. Fast forward months later and one could find a large group of students still heading into the same crowded classroom with that same intense desire to help those who are less fortunate.

Members of H.O.P.E. created bracelets, T-shirts, blankets and sombreros to sell at craft fairs in order to raise funds for their numerous projects. The group also relied heavily on the many generous donations from students, staff and community. Much of the first semester was dedicated to raising money for abused children in México. During the winter break, Gómez traveled back to his home town of El Refugio to distribute clothing and toys to the children of Casa Hogar San Francisco De Asís, which in English translates to The Saint Francis of Asís Shelter.

"The trip was amazing! We had a party and gave toys to children who had been abused," Gómez said, trying to sum up his trip.

Although the members of H.O.P.E. were not able to go along, they didn't miss out. H.O.P.E. not only helped the less fortunate in México, but also right here in Indianapolis. H.O.P.E. worked to support Riley Children's Hospital, and was also a major contributor to Will Power.

For many, the allure of H.O.P.E. was as simple as its title, "I love H.O.P.E! It feels great to know that I can make such a difference in the lives of others," senior Danielle Everts said.

Laugh It Up.

Classy. Creative. Change.

These three words epitomized the Thommy's, an award show that the Drama Club put on at the end of the year.

"We did it a little more formal," Drama Club advisor, Mr. Gabe Huddleston said. "We had an orange carpet and everyone dressed up."

In past years, the Thommy's were a themed event including Western and the twenties era. However, with new advisors, they decided to switch things up. The outcome was better than ever.

Guests arrived in formal wear and posed on the orange carpet for pictures before the event. Junior Michael Murphy, Vice President of Drama Club, escorted junior Liz Presley to the event. Later that night, they won the award for "Best On Stage Couple" for their work in "Pride and Prejudice."

"Well, my favorite part of the night was when Liz and I won 'Best On Stage Couple,'" Murphy said. "But the weather was gorgeous and everyone looked amazing. Everyone was happy."

After the orange carpet, the award show started. Senior Kelsey Ping took home the Thommy for "Best Actress" in "Servant of Two Masters" and a "Ring of Honor." Senior Kadeem Goddard won "Best Actor" for "Pride and Prejudice," while senior Aaron Stillerman took home "Best Improver."

"My favorite part of the night was going up to give my speech," Stillerman said. Stillerman thanked former teacher Jon Colby for getting him started in the improvisation field and also his mom for giving him the genes she once had as a "Class Clown."

The new take on the Thommy's was a total success. Huddleston said that the change is going to become a permanent one.

"The Thommy's were classy. The classiest ever. It was great food, great fun, and great awards," Murphy added.

"Everyone was dressed like it was the Oscars," Huddleston said, "and that is how it will be from now on."

Strive to Survive.

It was not bright or exciting; it did not have exotic plants or exotic animals. Instead, it was a dark, frightening location filled with tons of bad choices and wrong turns. Making it out of the terrifying jungle was a major task. Peers lurked in the shadows as they constantly waited to offer new victims harmful substances.

"It's a jungle out there, strive to survive," printed in red ink on jungle green t-shirts, this slogan became well known throughout the Warrior Nation.

Due to peer pressure, many did not survive in the jungle because they developed "Jungle fever." Wrong decisions, drugs and alcohol also caused the fever. Symptoms included: the need to be popular and fit in by using harmful substances as well as cravings for drugs and alcohol.

The only people to escape the jungle were students who didn't follow the crowd, students who took a different direction and stood up for themselves. One sure way to survive the wrath of the jungle was to just say no.

For the 147 Just Say No members who pledged to remain drug and alcohol free, saying no to harmful substances came as a natural instinct.

Members worked hard at influencing students to make the right decisions, even when others followed the wrong path. Just Say No provided students with methods to say no, even in the hardest situations.

"I believe Just Say No Club has the power to change minds because it gets students involved in school instead of drugs or alcohol." Freshman Dene Absher said.

Just Say No was honored to be recognized by Lance Armstrong and the Livestrong Foundation. Students, staff and Just Say No members wore yellow on Livestrong Tuesday to show appreciation for the foundation.

With Livestrong bracelets, mini basketballs t-shirts, ribbons and scholarships Just Say No did everything possible to make an impact on students and help others strive to survive in the jungle.

Speaking Of State.

For the speech team to take home the school's first State title of the year, they had to combine team unity and individual success that had been missing in previous years.

"The dynamics of this year's team are unmatched by any other team, in everyone's passion, hard work and unity with a common goal and an overall, genuine friendship that sets us apart from all other teams and ultimately brings us out on top," junior Katy Myers said.

Teamwork and unity in the season brought the speech team an eight-fold Sectional championship, a State title and amazing feelings of companionship, dedication and success.

"Hell Weeks" (extensive practice weeks) forced abundant teammate assistance and made every teammate strive for the best. Not one person on the team missed an opportunity to improve their piece or even help another better theirs.

"We got pushed," sophomore Arianna Russell said. "Mr. Black and Coach Fife told us we couldn't give up. They were encouraging."

There were two specific pieces that pushed to the top and became individual State champions. They included Russell and partner sophomore Miranda Nehrig's Original Performance "An Elephant Never Forgets," as well as senior Kadeem Goddard and partner junior Courtney William's scripted duo "I Am Sam."

"We deserved our victory," Goddard said. "Everyone was in it for everyone else. No one wanted it for themselves."

By the end of the season no one was overly surprised at the team's arrival to the top. There was a sense of confidence in the team's hard work.

"I didn't have to worry that we weren't going to do well," Russell said.

Overall, it was very clear to the entire team that there was a change. The team unity was greater than in any previous season and everyone could agree that there was no "I" in this team.

"We were a family," Goddard said.

March to the Beat.

Biono Giorno is a foreign phrase that band members became quite familiar with. A competition miles away from the Warrior Nation offered Band the opportunity of a lifetime.

Hard work and determination were important aspects of band. Not only did members work hard at perfecting performances, they worked hard for the money.

It was going to take more than a plane ticket and passport to get to their destination of Florence, Italy. It would take talent and perseverance, as well as an abundance of money that band did not possess.

Due to talent and impressive performances, the band was invited to play at the Florence International Music festival in Italy.

Band and Orchestra shared dreams of days in a mysterious paradise. Boats, tall towers, sunshine, and a huge music festival in a far away town were all things Band hoped for.

Hopes soon became reality for band as members of both Band and Orchestra put their heads together. They knew it would take a huge amount of money to make their hopes and dreams come true.

Instead of selling typical fundraiser items such as candy or candles, Band and Orchestra went above and beyond to earn the money.

Members showed the rest of the Warrior Nation just how much a trip to Italy would mean to them.

An unforgettable performance from band and orchestra plus a variety of pastas, salads and breadsticks from various vendors made up an extravagant evening. The Taste of Italy was held after school in the cafeteria. All proceeds benefitted Band and Orchestra for the trip to Italy.

Due to creativity and the money earned at the dinner Band was rewarded majorly. Members earned enough money to make it to Italy.

The ten day trip to Italy offered new food, experiences and a huge performance for Band.

Changing Tune.

Through hard work and dedication, it was no surprise that Orchestra was invited to the Florence music festival in Italy. They hoped to become internationally known for their brilliant pieces and performances.

Band and Orchestra used teamwork to make it out of the country. After a successful Taste of Italy fundraiser dinner, both Orchestra and Band possessed funds as well as the talent for the foreign music festival. Not only was it a concert to members, but it was the opportunity of a lifetime.

The ten-day trip started off in Venice with a private boat ride into St. Market's Square. The trip included tours of Venice, Pisa and Rome.

The fourth day on the foreign vacation was devoted strictly to the music festival. Dressed in their finest outfits, Orchestra members arrived bright and early prepared to play for tons of people. This was the chance they had been waiting for, the chance they had to internationally prove themselves. All of their hard work and dedication paid off.

The trip ended with a tour of the Galleria Dell'Academia, free time to roam the country, and a long flight back to the U.S.

Italy rewarded Orchestra members for all of their dedication, and long practices with new and exciting experiences plus memories of the sights they saw.

Due to many hours spent together on the flight there and back, as well as free time, members bonded and developed closer relationships with each other.

Ten days in beautiful cities with historic buildings offered Orchestra an unforgettable opportunity.

"I will never ever forget the trip to Italy, it was an awesome opportunity," junior Chrissy Hopp said. "I'll never forget the music festival, or the scenery and historic buildings."

Don't Stop the Music.

Top hats, upbeat moves and black dresses trimmed with sequins caused Connection members to have a "Very Superstitious" feeling on stage.

An unforgettable performance of the original Stevie Wonder ballad earned Connection a fourth place ranking in the state. "Very Superstitious" acted as the grand finale of five songs performed at the state competition; the others were not as funky or fun. Connection put their own spin on the classic song, as well as their own hip-hop moves.

"Performing at all of the competitions was definitely my favorite part of being involved with Connection," junior Ignoscio Miles said.

Many schools had a talented show choir, but at Warren it was a different story; there were eight extremely unique and skilled choirs. Each choir contained a different level of talent and different skills, but all choir members had one thing in common—their passion and heart to get out there and bare it all on stage.

Choir members worked hard at perfecting lyrics, moves and costumes for various competitions. Spending long hours after school and during competitions together helped members bond and gain a closer relationship with each other. In order to prepare for competitions, several members started their Saturday mornings as early as four a.m.

"The best part about being in choir has been getting to know the girls in Hi-Lites," sophomore Megan Lewis said. "We believe in each other and rely on each other a lot during competitions," Lewis added.

Connection was not the only choir that took home awards. Hi-Lites ranked eleventh in state for their performance of "Black Horse and the Cherry Tree." Other songs were performed but this was the most popular amongst members as well as the audience.

Chamber Singers won Grand Champions at Ben Davis and tenth overall at state.

From gospel to jazz to pop or even hip- hop, choir was guaranteed to get the audience's adrenaline pumping or heads bobbing to the beat.

Hopeful Hi-Lites! The ladies of Hi-Lites close with a strong finish to their state performance. With sparkling dresses and fresh dance moves, they placed 11th in the state.

Medieval Chambers! Chamber Singers serenade the crowd during their holiday performance. Each choir had unique costumes and themes for the different performances.

The Tender Land.

Crunching the rumpled tarp, the Winter Guard entered into the warm gymnasium filled with parents, fans and friends. They instantly began to squint feeling the hot lights flush against their faces; their arms turned to Jell-O while clinging to their flags. The girls marched across the tarp and took the shape of their group formation. Performance anxiety sat in, and all they could remember were Mr. Edward Meckes' words, "Tell your story!" It was time to perform.

Music from "The Tender Land," by Aaron Copland filled the gym and instantly all of the girls' fears melted away. All of their hard work was about to pay off in the form of a performance. What had taken months to prepare for would end in just five short minutes.

Starting off slow and quiet, the music began to build as it created a background for the guard to weave a tale of a middle class family in the breadbasket of America just before The Great Depression. Intense passion, fierce faces, hard-hitting movements, this is how the story must be told and the Winter Guard were just the girls to tell it.

Taking an award-winning musical and turning it into a guard show wasn't an easy task. It took a lot of parental support, many late nights and practice, practice, practice. But the show always begins with the girls.

While most students were pouring themselves a bowl of Wheaties and trying to eat their way through the breakfast of champions, Winter Guard was rising with only one thought in mind, competition. It is the fuel that drives every Warrior to greatness, with guard being no exception.

This year, the ladies' worked hard to defend their state championship and their second-in-world title. Falling just short of their goal, they placed sixth in the world. Despite their tough loss these girls never gave up, and continued to tell their story.

All In A Row! Lining up, the Class A Guard spends an afternoon preparing for their show in the Warrior Dome. A unison movement or stance, like this one, was very common in their show and something the girls were judged heavily on.

In Good Standings! Juniors Chelsea Apple, Elizabeth Heinhius, and Molly Thompson proudly lead the Winter Guard in a line-up during their show. The show entitled "The Tender Land" featured music by Aaron Copland.

Academics

The year brought a lot of change all around the school. It was not picking out what to wear to school or finding a prom date that was constantly on the minds of students, it was planning the next year's schedule. From early February to March, every freshman, sophomore, and junior spent hours on what classes to take next year, which was not an easy task to accomplish.

With so many classes, new and old, to choose from, it was hard to find one that you would not only enjoy but also gain insight into that topic. Luckily for students, the counselors were on their side to help them pick the classes that would best suit each student.

Marine Biology, a popular choice among students, presented information on aquatic life and how the animals survive in their environment. The learning became hands-on when students dissected several creatures ranging from a mussel, a squid, and finally a shark.

If science was not the students' "thing", but the limelight was, then Video and Radio Technology classes were perfect for them.

Students got to not only learn but experience the in's and out's of both respected fields. "I like the Advanced Broadcasting class because I have the ability to make an impact on everyone, everyday," said junior Jacob Saffold.

The year proved to be a big one for new classes that had been in the works for quite some time. Biomedical Studies was a new class that turned out to be a huge success all thanks to the instructor Mr. A.J. McAdams.

"Biomed" was featured on Fox 59's "How Cool is Your School?" as one of the coolest classes that Warren had to offer; it was safe to say that no one obliged to this. Theatre Arts History was a new class offered to students as well. They were given a chance to explore theatre from its origins in Greece.

Warren Central was without question a huge school that has endless opportunity, if students choose to take full advantage of them. With practically every class offered in one building, that is something that not too many schools could take claim to.

As studnets dissect a shark, also known as a dogfish, Ms. Erin Odya explains to the class where both the coronary artery and heart are located. Many students enjoyed taking Marine Biology because of their interest in dissecting and learning about the mysteries of the sea. photo/ Josh Walker

There have been a lot of changes to different parts of the school, including the faculty and staff. Most of the new teachers were in the freshman wing, but there were some that taught in the main building. Mrs. Carrie Reiberg was the new drama teacher, Mr. Tyson Fritts taught Japanese and Mr. AJ McAdams was the teacher of the new Biomedical Studies class.

"I think that with the amount of courses available it will be easier to decide on a career when the time comes. A lot of my friends are taking the new Biomedical Studies class, and I think that by allowing students to choose their classes, we are able to broaden ours horizons so that we will be able to further our education after high school."

There have been many changes this year including the academic area

Throughout the previous years, Warren has done a lot to expand the wide range of classes already offered at Warren Central.

For those students who were talented in the computer world, there was the new Computer Programming class, taught by Mr. William Meredith. The class was weighted and was designed for those students who planned to study engineering, computer science, mathematics, science or another field that uses computers.

Another class that was added to Warren's curriculum, was Biomedical Studies taught by Mr. AJ McAdams. The class was for students who planned to enter a medically based career.

The class studied body systems and how they related and cooperated to make the body function correctly. In addition, they performed labs in which they dissected a cow heart, and used equipment that found blood pressure and measured heart beats per minute.

There is also a second year of the class where the focus is specifically on the human body systems. This course will be taught by Mr. Richard Gray.

While there were many successes at Warren, some new things weren't as popular.

Ed Tracker, the much talked about new grading system, was not able to deliver. Despite the many tutorials given to teachers on how to operate the system and guarantees to students being able to access their grades from their personal computer, none of the promises have been fulfilled.

However, there was much to be applauded. From new hit classes such as Biomedical Studies, Theatre History and Computer Programming, this was a year of change at Warren.

Junior Mychael Spencer is pondering at which temperature the enzyme amylase will break down carbohydrates into monosacchrides in the newly-developed class, Biomedical Studies. "This class is preparing me for my future and even though it's a lot of work, I know it will pay off."

Theatre History was a new class offered to students interested in learning more about Shakespeare and other classical playwrights.

A Symphony of Smells

Hands-on activities through experimenting and dissecting is yet another way for students to learn

"I really like cutting open the animals and seeing all the organs in the body."

-Devin Jefferson

Devin Jefferson carefully dissects the starfish by curving the edges trying not to damage the organs inside. Jefferson likes dissecting a lot because he thinks dissecting is cool and a good way to learn.

Some students think dissecting can be an exciting way to learn about the anatomy and inner workings of an animal. Some think dissecting is gross and smells. For others, it is an unnecessary and cruel way to learn about animals.

But like it or not, dissecting was a major part of the grade in several classes.

For instance, in Marine Biology, students dissected a worm to learn about its anatomy.

"It's just fun looking into the animal's body learning about the different organs inside. If you have never dissected a worm, would you have known that a worm as five hearts in one section of the body?" senior Floyd Webb said.

They also dissected starfish. "It's a weird experience, but it can be enjoyable if you can get over the smell of formaldehyde," junior Brook Wood said as she carefully carved out a piece of saltwater starfish.

The Zoology and Marine Biology classes dissected many animals such as a dog fish which is commonly known as a shark, a squid, a worm, mussels and a tarantula.

Because of the smell and the texture, some students had a problem touching the dead animals. It was hard for some students to get over the smell of the formaldehyde.

"It stinks to do dissections because the animals are old and gross. I just let my lab partner do all the dissecting of the animal. I feel like it's harmful to the animals," junior Bridget Sherwood said.

According to department chair Elizebeth Campbell, the science department orders hunderds of animals each year for dissections. In some classes, students dissect over six different animals a semester such as the starfish and the squid.

Throughout dissections and labs, there are many different utensils that are used to complete the task. In Bio-Med, students used breakers to observe amylase enzyme chemicals and scalpels to cut open a sheep's heart.

Teachers also have their own opinions about the dissections.

"I love dissections," Marine Biology teacher Ms. Erin Odya said. "It's my favorite part of teaching the class. If it was up to me, we would do one every week. It is a memorable experience, and it's better than looking at diagrams that tell you about it."

Throughout dissections and labs, students use many different tools and processes to complete the task. In Marine Biology, students had the experience to dissect a cow heart, observe amylase enzyme chemicals and measure the length of a squid during dissections.

Throughout the Zoology and Marine Biology field trips, students saw many different types of animals; the trips have been a learning experience as well as a time to have fun with friends. After the field trip, the students had to pick an animal that they saw and write a report on it.

Take A Road Trip

Students travel to broaden their horizons

"The MUNUC experience was a lot of fun. I learned a lot and it was a top-off to my senior year."

"Seeing a real meerkat was an interesting experience. It reminded me a lot of Timon from the Lion King!"

With gas prices steadily rising and tipping the scales at $3.95 a gallon, students not only felt the drain in their wallets but also in the classroom.

Many trips were cut from the program and teachers often had to limit the size of their group to fit onto an activity bus. These buses were designed to hold fewer students, and also were a fuel-saving way of transportation. Although many trips were denied, one trip remained steadfast in the curriculum.

For the past ten years, Mr. Nick Salemi has taken his International Relations classes to MUNUC (Model United Nations at the University of Chicago), a convention held in the Windy City that helps to turn young student leaders into productive problem solving members of society. Twenty students debated on how to solve the various problems that plague third-world countries. Each student was put into a group; each group was given an impoverished country and in turn had to try and solve their countries problems.

"It gives you a really good glimpse of how foreign policies work," junior Katy Myers said.

Finding the funds were where many field trips meet their demise. Students looked forward to a fun-filled day of roller coasters, pizza and games at the post-prom trip to Kings Island. But many car-less students were very disappointed to find out that they would have to cancel their trip, because of the surging prices of gas that forced the PTA to cancel all transportation to the Cincinnati amusement park.

This was just the beginning of many changes set to take place around the Warrior Nation. "Field trips are going to be a thing of the past," Principal Rich Sheplar said. Field trips such as MUNUC, Ball State J-Day, and the Indianapolis Zoo are the last of a dying breed.

While in Chicago for the MUNUC conference, junior Joel Weyrauch gets caught in the middle of a protest defending animal cruelty. All of the students had an exciting time in Chicago, and they also received an honorable mention for devising a resolution concerning economics and finances.

Hidden In The Details

Students create art filled with their own personal expressions

"Art is important to me because it lets me express whatever thoughts I have going through my head."

-Spencer Sholty

With a new mural in the works, the extremely accomplished work shown at the art show and the large number of winners at Project Excel, the arts had a great year at Warren Central.

Of course, the students wouldn't be able to achieve such levels of professionalism without the support of a staff, several of which have their own professional carrers and routinely exhibit in galleries around Indianapolis.

All types of art were represented in the art curriculum. There were classes in drawing and painting, 3-D art, jewelry, ceramics and photography.

Each of the types of art had their own personal appeal and offered something different to all aspiring artists.

In Drawing and Painting, Dr. Sally Rice taught everything from elemental figure drawing, techniques to work with everything from pastels to oils, to teaching students how to express themselves and their own unique perspective.

Ceramic students learned everything from wheel thowing and various techniques of hand construction, including coil and slab building and finishing techniques- including glazing, engobes and underglazes.

Nearly everything covered in 3-D art jumped off of the wall with bright colors and memorable patterns. In the class, students learned to make everything from realistic models of houses, tribal masks, the art of Quilling and other techniques- including mosaic and paper mache.

If a student desired to make something beautiful for themselves or a loved one, jewerly was a great class to take. In the class, elemental techniques, including metal cutting, soddering and finishing were covered. Once these simple building blocks were mastered, students were free to make everything they could possibly want from a bracelet or a necklace to a tirara.

At the end of the year, students from all of these classes submitted their best or favorite pieces to the Art Show where they were admired by everyone.

Of course, through all these classes, students simply learned the building blocks for their own means of personal expression- whether it be in college, if they continue in the arts, or for their own personal pleasure.

The important thing was for students to be able to express themselves in their own art. Without the building blocks, an artist is unable to combine techniques together to create new and beautiful works that enrich the world around them and create some dialouge with themeslves.

This year's art show was a huge success as students displayed their paintings, sculptures, jewelry, 3-D art and photography for students and visitors to observe. The paintings, along with other pieces of art, were actually sold to buyers who wanted to display the beautiful works of art.

Four students observe the fabulous pictures taken by their fellow students in Media Arts while many others peruse through all of the different masterpieces created. Students in advanced Media Arts picked out their best photographs, cut a matte and then put them on display for the school to see.

Food For Thought

"Cinco de Mayo was really fun because we got to eat food, and we learned a lot about a cool Mexican holiday."

"Taking five years of Spanish has really been rewarding. At first, you think you are going to die to from all the hardwork, but it really pays off when you actually can speak the language and understand what people are saying."

Using food as a learning tool? Who would've guessed?

Although it may be taken for granted, food is a major power in our society. With groundbreaking documentaries like "Super Size Me" invading our televisions and the media showering us with images of the latest diet crazes, it isn't hard to believe that Warren Central teachers began to adapt food into their curriculum.

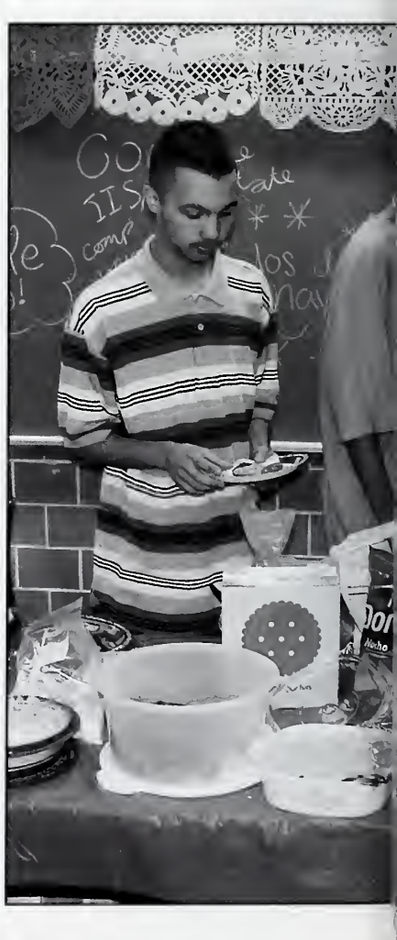
Choose a grapefruit; and slowly peel back it's thick skin. Now, for most people the next step is to sink their teeth into this healthy snack. But a group of students in Ms. Jane Smith's AP Psychology class had to look past this tasty treat and take a look at the grapefruit from a surgeon's perspective.

For a lucky five-some, the grapefruit was picked to represent the human brain, and students had to carefully slice through its juicy layers and locate parts of the "brain" like the cerebral cortex and the corpus callosum.

Psychology isn't the only class that gets to dig and play in food. The Foreign Language Department has welcomed food into the curriculum with open arms for many years. Teachers found a way to bypass the cultural barrier, filling the gap with food. For a fiesta celebrating El Dia de Los Muertos, Day of the Dead, students in Ms. Amy Moeller's Spanish classes were encouraged to bring in a typical Latin-American dish.

Sausages, potatoes and dumplings, may not be a "normal" dinner, but these foods among others filled the room of Frau Folco at the annual Oktoberfest party. Members of German Club ate their way to a good time, while participating in this popular Germanic tradition.

Food holds many powers. And as teachers have learned, the greatest was it's ability to bring students together.



Juniors Allyson Reynolds and Courtney Stinson disperse a French dish they prepared to their class. The dish was crepes, but the two added their own little twist on it. They are usually prepared with fruit such as strawberries, but the cooking duo used carmel and apples instead.

Seniors Sasha Bannister and Dylan Leonard admire the mask that Sara Justus made for their Day of the Day party in Ms. Beth Wolff's class. The making of the masks was a competition where the students had to close their eyes and cut the holes and mouth into the paper.

Ms. Moeller's Spanish class crowds around the table to get a taste of delicious cuisine as well as a lesson on Latin American ways of life. Most students think that food is a wonderful learning device because it helps make the experience realistic and memorable.

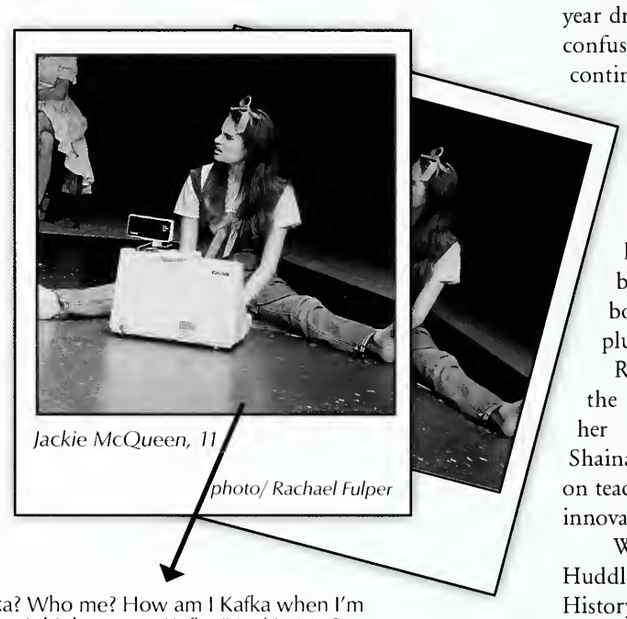
Hold the Applause

Drama department takes new directions into a brighter future

"Ms. Reiberg is more hands on than any of my other teachers. Our first day back we played a game to build trust and unity."

-Shaina Tuttle



Jackie McQueen, 11

"Who is Kafka? Who me? How am I Kafka when I'm a monkey? No, I think you are Kafka." Jackie McQueen performs as a dumb Franz Kafka.

The drama deparment was shocked when they recieved news that Jon Colby was going to leave Warren at the end of the 2006-2007 year to pursue a career in acting.

However, three-year veteran from Decatur High School, Ms. Carrie Reiberg, came to take his place. With 15 plays already under her belt, she was more than qualified for the job. Also came the addition of Theatre Arts History, making a total of six classes to the Theatre Department.

Senior Tameca Montez, a two year drama student, said, "I at first was confused on whether or not we would continue with all the drama classes. I was not sure whether there would be another teacher to step in and take over the Advanced Drama classes. But Reiberg is really great, and I love her style of teaching. It's exciting because we do not do much bookwork which is definitely a plus."

Reiberg was a great addition to the department. Students enjoyed her teaching techniques. Junior Shaina Tuttle liked Reiberg's hands-on teaching style and enjoyed all of the innovative games that the class played.

With veteran Mr. Gabe Huddleston's new class, Theatre Arts History, more students got into the drama swing. Students no longer felt that the class was just for girls or actors, and they were able to learn the roots of theatre. Huddleston felt students learned better with plays such as, "A Doll's House," "The Importance of Being Earnest," and "Miss Julie."

There was no mistake that students were learning more efficiently from these plays. Huddleston will be covering various Shakespeare plays in his curriculum for next year and hopes to get more students involved in the class.

Reiberg ended her year with her own spin on, "Servant of Two Masters." She was happy that she was able to pick her own cast and she actually got to see new talents.

Reiberg's first play was a great success and she plans on doing at least three more in the upcoming year. They say that during their off season they plan on recruiting members to the theatre department.

At the end of the 2007-2008 year open auditions were held for anyone that wanted into either of the advanced theatre programs. This was the first time this ever happened.

The year ended with much success. Both "Pride and Prejudice" and "Servant of Two Masters" sold out completely. That was not only a good sign for the productions, but for the future of the program.

Look At It A Whole New Way

Thinking about things in a non-conventional way can sometimes be better

"This project was a fun alternative, rather than studying to get ready for the AP Spanish exam in May." -Afifa Irani

"Physics is a really rewarding class to take because you learn about things and then apply them to real-world experiences. The bow and arrow lab was especially cool because I got to make the bow from my calculations."

Since Warren Central was such a diverse school, teachers differed their teaching methods to accommodate students' learning styles. Projects were the most common and familiar way for students to relate the material being taught to real life.

Sometimes, students were assigned a project where they thought they were not going to learn anything. On the other hand, many students considered doing projects a fun, hands-on way to get a better understanding of material.

In Ms. Pam Bailey's and Dr. Steve Landy's Physics classes students did a "Bow and Arrow" lab to help them learn what angle to fire an arrow at. "We were attempting to determine the ideal angle at which to fire a projectile. Doing the lab really helped me understand better," junior James Wager said.

Labs were not the only type of projects teachers assigned to encourage learning. In the World Language Department, Ms. Beth Wolff did multiple projects to enhance and encourage knowledge of Latin American culture. In particular, with her AP Spanish class, Wolff turned the oral final into a presentation about holidays in Hispanic countries in hopes of better preparing students for the AP exam. Senior Afifa Irani said, "This project was a fun alternative, rather than studying, to get ready for the Spanish AP exam in May."

Projects were also a big hit in the Social Studies department. To help students get a better understanding of the structure of the human brain, psychology students built brains out of Play-doh. "When we made the Play-doh brains in psychology, it really helped me understand what the brain looked liked," junior Britnee Williams said.

Doing a project was an exciting way to experience a class and helped students get a better understanding of a concentrated subject instead of doing the same thing day after day.

Seniors James Hamilton and Afifa Irani present a project to their Spanish V class on the different Latin American holidays and how they are traditionally celebrated. The students learned all the ins and outs of holidays such as a Quinceanera or El Dia de Guanacaste.

Many of the students did hours of research to find statistics, graphs, and other data on their specific country that they were assigned.

Senior Ashley Smith and junior Amanda Junker carefully study the instructions on how to put a Play-doh brain together while they mold the Play-doh into different shapes. The AP Psychology class did this project in order to gain a better understanding of the brain, how it fuctions and what it looks like.

"The morning announcements are pretty good and since there are a lot of new anchors, it'll be exciting to see how the show will progress from year to year. My favorite part of the whole show is when Chelsea Tuttle is an anchor. She makes the show fantastic."

Bursting with a craving to be let free to 4,000 students, the news and latest happenings around the Warrior Nation are revealed on Channel 6 every morning during first period.

Warren Live kept students and teachers tuning in for more everyday as teleprompters rolled with the latest scores, updates and important information about upcoming meetings and events.

Even Mr. Dennis Jarett could not resist missing out on the morning mayhem any longer.

"I came back to Warren because I really wanted to continue the program in the way that it was going. I wanted direct impact on the students, and that's something I was not getting at my other job," Jarett said.

Students, anchors and TV crew welcomed Jarett back with more than open arms.

"This is my first year working with Jarett, he is definitely someone to look up to, and I consider him another parent. He's understanding but knows how to correct you when you've made a mistake," senior Tameca Montez said.

There were many new anchors and TV crew members who worked hard at thinking up creative ideas and skits to be aired. The WC crew was always on the go, shooting the latest Double-time or Remix edition, taping a commercial, grilling someone with intense questions for the "Hot Seat" and challenging students and teachers on the famous game show "10 Seconds." Producers met daily to come up with scripts and to make sure the following show ran smoothly.

Important H.U.A.H. updates were broadcasted live as it intensified. Daily segments inspired students to beat the can count as it grew. Eventually, the students ended up bringing in a grand total of 44,414 cans.

Even though anchors are an extremely important factor to getting news spread throughout the school, the famous faces on the TV screen weren't the only ones working hard to deliver important info. The faces hidden behind the computers, pens, pencils and paper were always busy writing about current events, whether it was for the Warren Owl or the Wigwam, every student got to give their input on important issues going on.

If your mind was boggled by every detail from Friday nights game, the next major athlete, the huge drama production, or current events at Warren, The Owl had you covered with a backstage pass to all the inside scoop.

WEDM 91.1, the Warren radio station, rushed through our speakers filling our heads with the latest music plus a play-by-play sports update. The station played several genres of music and broadcasts live football and basketball games.

With daily announcements, monthly inside scoop, sports updates and a yearly review, Warren always found a way to follow the news as it was frequently changing directions.

There were many different types of equipment used around the school to inform students of the latest news and events. Whether it was to produce an episode of Warren Live, put out an issue of the Owl, or broadcast a segment of WEDM 91.1, there was always something changing and evolving.

Challenge Your Passion

Talent turned into competition as students showed their skills

"We are very proud of our students and the tremendous amount of time and effort put into preparing for the competitions."

-Ms. Lou Anne Schwenn

The television show "Iron Chef" has come to Warren Central in the form of ProStart culinary competitions. Students went to compete against other schools and battle it out until judges declared a victorious team.

On February 6, two teams from the Walker Career Center competed in the Indiana ProStart and Indiana Future Community Leaders of America (FCCLA) Culinary Arts and Management competitions.

"Your team pretty much goes and competes against other teams to see whose food is the best," junior Emily Gibson said. The Walker team won Best Knife Skills specialty award and a silver medal in FCCLA.

"The Culinary Management competition was a three-component competition consisting of two rounds of quiz bowl and a case study," said Ms. Lou Anne Schwenn, director of the Walker Career Center.

The Walker Career Center team won the Best Case Study specialty award and place third in ProStart. "We are very proud of our students and the tremendous amount of time and effort put into preparing for the competitions," said Schwenn.

Students in the Pro Start program can get three transferable credits to Ivy Tech if they choose to continue on the cooking career path.

Since ProStart is such a fantastic opportunity and it is like a real-life setting, it helps students decide on whether they would like to continue with culinary arts in college. "It helps you decide whether you want to be in the culinary field later in life," said Gibson.

ProStart was not only good for learning cooking skills, it helped students learn how to set acheiveable goals and build strong friendships.

"One of my culinary goals was to better my baking skills, I haven't acheived this goal quite yet, but I plan on reaching it next year," junior Ryan Whittington said, "My favorite thing that I have learned in culinary classes is how to cook more of my favorite things and most importantly I have learned the meaning of true friendship. My favorite memory is just everything we have done this year from Career Fest to competitions. "

Technology Takes a Turn

Students get the experience they need to be successful in life

Is your house smart? The students involved in Walker Career Center's Electronic Technology (ET) program worked side by side with the students building the Walker Career Center's Building Trades home to build Walker Career Center's first home with "smart home" technology.

The home was wired for cable television, Internet and data network, telephone, integrated audio system, home theater, exterior camera system and pre-wiring for a future HD satellite system.

The integrated audio system includes a volume and speaker system that allows the homeowners to communicate with each other without leaving the room they are in. The speakers are located in the master bedroom, dining room, kitchen, nook and outside deck.

The home theater was wired for a projector screen set-up so that it was like a real movie theater. It was also wired for a plasma television.

Working on the wiring for the home gave students a once in a lifetime opportunity for them to learn more about wiring for the future and let students choose what part of the house they wanted to work on. Students also learned how to wire a home for one particular item like the television or the speaker system.

"The Smart home technology is becoming more affordable and more people are wanting it in their home becuase it increases the worth of the home and makes it more comfortable to live in," Mr. Randy Decker said.

"I didn't know a lot about it, so it gave me a chance to learn more about the wiring part," junior Aamir Williams said. "You get more options concerning the things you want to do."

Sports

The coaching staff is always a pivotal part to every sports team. The head coach is the one who the entire team shows the utmost respect for. The head coach is the leader who teaches the plays that each team needs to succeed.

Often times, however, the head coach that teams, fans, teachers, and parents alike have become accustomed to and admire, decide it's time to step down from the head coaching position.

The Warrior nation endured many of these changes during the 2007-2008 school year. The first major resignation as head coach came from Mr. Steve Tutsie. Tutsie led the Warriors football team to his share of the dynasty, as they won their fourth consecutive State title in 2006. He was a defensive coordinator for the Warriors before accepting the position as head coach. Tutsie, and the Warrior football team, suffered a sectional loss during the 2007 season. The first sectional loss in eight years. After all the emotion settled down, Tutsie decided it was his time to allow a new coach to take over on the field.

The Warriors head basketball coach, Scott Heady, also decided to resign at the end of his 13 seasons with the Warriors. This season alone was a highlight for Heady, pulling out a 15-win season with one of the hardest schedules in Indiana.

"I decided that this is the right time in my career for a change. I look forward to pursuing other professional opportunities," Heady said.

This year also had several first-time head coaches. The wrestling team was led by Coach Matt Schroeder, an assistant for several years, took the team in some new directions. The team was young, but still sent two wrestlers to state.

Also, Coach David Burton took over the girl's basketball team and led them on to a positive season. The girls ended their season with a tough loss to Cathedral in the first round of Sectionals, but played well throughout the entire season.

After a sudden departure of long-time girls head track coach Hope Sanders, Mr. James Taylor took the reigns in hope of leading the team to a second straight State championship.

It was obvious that the directions of many teams were changed this year at Warren Central and the future holds a lot of promise for the coaches and athletes alike.

today not tomorrow

Warriors suffer tough loss in Sectional finals for the first time in eight years.

"I'm not trying to brag or boast, but if there's a better back in the state of Indiana, I would like to know who it is," head coach Steve Tutsie said. "And we know a little bit about backs."

Jewel Hampton was a pivotal part of the Warrior's season and did all he could to help his team win.

When the Warriors played Center Grove all was on the line, and more importantly, the MIC title was on the table. Hampton had long runs for the Warriors helping to lead the team to victory.

The first half of the game was very quiet and kept everyone in anticipation, but after half time, fireworks started to fly for the Warriors.

Warren started by converting two fourth downs on their first possession of the half, and then George Cheesebourough scored on a fourth-and-one with 4:29 left in the third quarter for the games first score.

Warren Central came in averaging 39.7 points per game. Center Grove was averaging 36.9; everyone was interested to see how the Warriors were going to end up.

Next, the Warriors forced Center Grove to go three and out, and the next play led Cheesebourough to another touchdown for the Warriors.

The score then started to teeter-totter until the fourth quarter when the Warriors were able to capitalize on the Trojan defense and score two more touchdowns allowing them to win 28-21.

Another advantage the Warriors had with Hampton is when the defenders were stacked against him during the North Central Sectional game to prevent him from scoring, he began blocking for his teammates to help the team to a victory of 20-14.

Hampton said he would block for the other blocks any day to help move the team further.

But with all the advantage the Warriors had they still had some downfalls. It was the first time since 2000 that the Warriors lost an season opener, or to a non-MIC competitor. The Warriors were defeated by Merrillville while on the road.

The next downfall was during what some considered the most important game of the season. The Warriors were playing at Carmel for the first time in five years, and the twelfth men were in attendance from both schools. The score was constantly going back and forth, but the Greyhounds were able to overcome the Warriors in the fourth, leading to the first MIC loss this season with a score of 42-35.

The last and most disappointing downfall for the Warriors happened at home during Sectional finals. The Warriors took on Hamilton Southeastern for the first time since 2005, but the results were not anything the Warriors were expecting. The final score was 31-10, and the Drive for Five ended unexpectedly.

A month after the season ended the Warriors were shocked with the resignation of head coach Steve Tutsie.

rivals left in the dust

Warriors take home County title after a rough start to the season.

From sweeping the Marion County Championship title to having a returning veteran compete at State Finals for the third year, the boys cross country team has plenty of achievements to look back on.

The season presented a challenge for the Warriors with the loss of a stacked top seven from the previous year, but the team had no problem filling gaps and finding the right athletes to guide the team.

Seniors Micah Aldrich, Orion Wenrich, Shaun Doerflien, and Joel Mathews, all immediately felt a difference; there was a closer bond than before. The new changes helped the boys throughout the season.

At the Maconaquah Invitational several runners placed in the top 25 spots and the team preformed one of its best races by placing second out of 13 teams.

At the New Prairie Invitational the team endured a physically demanding race on Agony Hill against 10 other teams ranked in the top 25. They placed 8th out of 31 teams, which helped prepare them for the meet of the season, County.

At County, the team came together for the first time during the season and everyone made a difference. It was a race of top competitors consisting of Franklin Central, Ben Davis, Lawrence North, and Lawrence Central. With a record of many ups and downs midway of the season, the team was very skeptical.

However, a sense of fear and insecurity helped to drive the team. Doerflien and junior Ryan Daughtery moved from the back of the pack at County to later place in the top four and five spots respectively.

"We were down the last K by ten points. Everyone made sure to kick so we could seal the deal and beat our main opponent, Franklin Central," said Daughtery.

This advancement helped to lower points for the team in a positive way. Strong contributes came from Aldrich and Wenrich who ran their best races of the year. Also, Aldrich and Pack both earned the title of All-County runners.

"We all worked really hard this season and tried our best," said Orion Wenrich.

Wrapping up the season, Pack continued on to State individually after the team took a heartbreaking loss to Noblesville by placing seventh when only the top six teams were admitted.

"It was different being at the line alone, but I had my team and coaches with me on the sidelines for support," said Pack.

Despite the up and down record, a talented group ended a challenging season with a better structure to run in upcoming years, and has a County trophy on display.

one point too shy

New faces from the freshman class are led by veterans to pursue a great season.

Senior Corteese Berry was left standing alone at the beginning of the season with a new team. That wouldn't stop her, or the new freshmen. There were records to be made and titles to be won.

"I felt by myself sometimes because there was no one there with me. But it was fun to see all the girls grow and become close with them," Berry said.

Returning Sophomore Breauana Turner and junior Emily Wright were ready to help lead along with Berry for a new season.

Several meets at the beginning of the season set the standards and let the coaches notice who was stepping up.

The Lafayette Jefferson Invite was an exceptional meet. It ended with the team placing in fourth out of ten. The team aslo had an impressive finish at the Pendleton Heights Invite with a third place finish against fifteen teams. The Park Tudor Invite was a also a season highlight with the ladies taking first place out of six teams.

Underclassmen prevailed as the season was midway. During the Culver Invite, two-time varsity sophomore Breauna Turner set a new school record with a time of 19:58 during the 5K.

"I felt pretty good about my new school record," Turner said. "I always wanted to accomplish the goal of breaking a record since middle school. It was a big accomplishment."

Wright, who is also a returning varsity member, experienced a rough season with a stress fracture. It set her back in the midst of the season and she could only run a limited amount of hours a week.

"The stress fracture started my sophomore year, and it continued through my junior year. I was very upset about it and I will be set back for track as well."

However, freshmen Jacklyn Howland and Kelly Hodges helped to strengthen the team when Wright was struggling. Without a doubt their impressive contributions at the Park Tudor Invite helped them to maintain a varsity spot and inch into the top seven. The new freshmen helped to add a more well rounded team in entering Sectionals.

A new change to the Sectional round was the location. The meet's new location was changed to New Palestine. Warren was competing against top competitors Franklin Central, Beech Grove, and Roncalli.

The race started off with the girls rather scattered. The main competition for the ladies was the Franklin Central Flashes. Other schools didn't have such stacked teams. The ladies began to advance throughout the race and started to place in upper positions. A tough race ended with the Warriors placing just behind Franklin in second place with a score of 57-58.

The team did advance on to Regionals and Semi-State and ended the season placing 12th during the Semi-State meet.

"Freshman Jacklyn Howland was the most consistent runner throughout the Sectional and Semi-state meets but strong performances were put out by all of the girls," Jensen said.

The young team ended a challenging season with several titles and records won.

never never quit

Motivational speaking was influential to the Lady Warriors this season.

"The highlight of my senior season was playing Ben Davis on Pack the House night. We played together as a team, we had a good crowd, and it's always fun to beat Ben Davis of course," senior and captain Brittany Miller said about her final season playing volleyball for the Lady Warriors.

"Our seniors came through, and all the work they put in to reach our goal and constantly get better each match we played," Head Coach Dan Hagist said.

The Lady Warriors were fast approaching the game they worked toward all season: Sectionals against Cathedral High School, who has won Sectionals finals 19 times in the past 20 years.

Naturally, like years past, the Cathedral game was the most anticipated game of the year, but there was one thing different this year then it had been in past years.

Usually the Lady Warriors draw the Lady Irish in the first round of Sectionals. That was not the case this time around though. The Lady Warriors drew Broad Ripple as their first team to face.

They blew by the Rockets winning in three games. Next was MIC competitor team the North Central Panthers, who they also beat in three games moving the Warriors into the sectional finals.

Finally, the Warriors were due to face long-time rival the Cathedral Irish. While the Irish had a consistent 6-foot front line compared to the Warrior average height of 5-foot 8, odds didn't look good for the Warriors.

The Warrior Nation traveled to Cathedral High School to watch the match and do all they could to support the Lady Warriors.

The Warriors put forth tremendous effort, and did all they could to try and out-shine the Irish, yet things did not turn out as expected for the Warriors.

Unfortunately, tradition rang true and the Irish outplayed the ladies beating them in three tough games with scores of 12-25, 12-25, and 13-25, leaving the Warriors to take the title of Sectional runner-up.

"The Cathedral game is one game we work up to all season long," said Miller.

"Cathedral has always knocked us out of Sectionals, and our team has been striving to make a change. This year proved no different. We fought hard and didn't give up, despite the intimidating stats and home court advantage. The game ended in three matches and I'm proud to say we're sectional runner-up, an improvement from previous years."

Other awards given to the team include All-Conference and All-County to Miller, and All-County to senior captain Teka Flowers.

Overall the girls had a good season finishing it out with the title of Sectoinal runners up, and with enjoyable memories.

respect your limitations

Warriors play with intensity to defeat top-ranked Center Grove.

Intensity and passion; two things that can truly make a difference on any team, happened to play a big role this season for the Warriors.

The boys had a rough beginning, losing to Hamilton Southeastern, 2-0. They then picked things up to win one against Heritage Christian. However, the Warriors then went through a tough losing streak.

This was the point of realization for the team. After having put in so much time and work into pre-season workouts all summer, they were bound and determined to get on top of things and get their goals accomplished.

As the Warriors bounced back from their losing steak, they prepared for state ranked Center Grove. The boys went out with determination and had nothing on their minds but winning. It was the last regular season game for the Warriors, and they wanted a big win before Sectionals.

The Warriors started this game differently. They lined up in a new formation with new starters. These young players had heart and were ready to help in every way possible.

The game started off rough with the boys battling it out up and down the field. Senior Rafi Saleh scored the first and only goal of the game with a prefect cross-in from junior Jacob Aldrich at the end of the first half.

Coming back out after a half with a motivational speech from Head Coach Jacob Isang, the Warriors were ready to continue their drive to success.

The boys held the Trojans to zero in the second half with excellent defensive efforts by junior Grant Brackin, senior Marco Boulais, and senior goalie Jacob Muncy. Boulais, who played sweeper, worked together with Muncy to be sure the Trojans did not score and ended the game with a win, 1-0.

"We played with intensity for the full 80 minutes," Christian Wilson said. "This has been a struggle for us all season, but this game we stepped up and got the job done."

After the huge win against Center Grove, the Warriors were ready for Sectionals. However, after allowing Greenfield to get a lead on them in the first half 2-0, the Warriors came back out in the second half ready to make a comeback. Sophomore Levi Fistrovich scored a goal for the Warriors, but after missing 14 shots on goal, the Warriors could not come up with the win.

As the season came to a wrap, the boys may not have won Sectionals, but they did find the strength to play with intensity and passion. Although this has been a struggle all year, they found a way through the hardships to reach their goal. With so many positive young players on the team, they plan to carry this on next year.

fighting to the finish

Warriors win first round of Sectionals in overtime.

There was no doubt that this year was going to be a rebuilding year for the soccer team but even Coach Gary Roberts did not expect to do as well as they did this season after graduating five starting seniors.

In their last regular season game, the ladies played hard and came up with a huge win against the Franklin Central Flashes, scoring three goals and holding the Flashes to zero.

With the regular season out of the way, the Lady Warriors were ready to take the field against Bishop Chatard in the round before the semi-finals of Sectionals.

Once halftime rolled around, the score was 1-0. The ladies had worked hard and let one goal in before the beginning of the second half. Bishop Chatard had the lead until the last minute of the game when freshman Emily Abrams scored a long cross kick off of a Bishop Chatard defender leg to tie the game.

With the 80 minutes of regular play over, the score was tied 1-1. The game was forced into overtime. Jenny Mendez scored a penalty kick and ended the game with a final score of two goals by the Warriors to one for Bishop Chatard.

With the win over Bishop Chatard, the Warriors were heading into Sectional finals with their heads held high. The ladies had to take on highly ranked Cathedral. They took a tough loss to the Irish with a score of 0-3.

"I think the team really pulled together this year," senior captain Rachel Fulper said. "We played our best, and it was disappointing that we took a loss to Cathedral in the end."

Juniors Jenny Mendez and Cheyenne Brackin were the leading scorers this season for the Lady Warriors, Mendez with 19 goals and Brackin with 12 goals. Also, both were acknowledged as All-State players and Marion County Coaches Association players. Mendez was also named an All-County player for her outstanding season.

Not only were the Warriors excelling on the field, but most were excelling in the classroom. In particular, juniors Adria Steuer and Darrian Bost and senior Rachael Fulper, were all named as Academic All-State players.

"This year's team went a lot farther than most expected," Coach Roberts said when recounting the season. "I thought the ladies would struggle early, but in the end I knew they would pull together and work as a team."

This ended up being a very strong season for the Lady Warriors with a record of nine wins and eight losses. The whole team stepped up and proved that they can play fierce against all opponents.

The Warriors worked hard to play better every game and just improve week by week. With great captains and strong leadership, the Warriors really helped pull together this season.

warriors rock it

Cheerleaders keep the warrior spirit alive with multiple squads.

Through the wins, losses, sunshine and cold weather, the cheerleaders were there keeping up the excitement and getting the crowd pumped.

To help the ladies get ready for the football season, they did fundraisers such as selling cookie dough and doing a car wash. A change the squad made included not traveling to IU for their annual camp, but instead having the camp come o them. They spent nine hours a day for three days learning new chants, cheers, and dances to do at games.

One game in particular that the ladies really looked forward to was the night after an extremely close game to the North Central Panthers. After the game was over, they all headed downtown to the channel 13 studios to pump up everyone watching the 11 o'clock news.

The girls were chosen to be a part of Operation Football, a segment on the sports news where a different cheerleading squad is chosen each week to come and represent their school. They spent hours of practice perfecting a cheer to do for the show.

Something else the girls did outside of games was that the day before every game a group of them would make banners to put in the football locker rooms, along with balloons and other small posters. To get the players pumped, the day of the game, they would go running through the lockroom.

A game that the players and cheerleaders definitely needed to be pumped for was the very intense football game against the Ben Davis Giants. Even when the crowd was angry and yelling, they still worked hard to keep the fan's spirits high.

On homecoming night, which was also senior night, the Warriors played a top ranked team, the Center Grove Trojans. It was full of touchdowns and pushups. Twenty-eight pushups to be exact. At each game the cheerleaders did pushups to equal the score after every touchdown

The most exciting game by far for the girls was against the highly ranked Carmel Greyhounds. A lot of hours of practice were put forth into getting prepared for this game. A couple of the girls put time into making a large banner for the stands that said "Hush the Puppies." Along with that, each girl also brought in a stuffed dog on a leash, which was used to represent the a greyhound.

Both the basketball and football cheerleaders did a great job during their seasons to continue the faithful traditions of the squads.

The cheerleaders worked hard to make the best of all the games during football and basketball season.

one last point

Warriors rally together to surpass the Greyhounds on their home court in overtime.

To some it was just any old Thursday, but for the Warriors it was a big game day.

It was time to take on the currently ranked second Carmel Greyhounds, and of course it is always a big game for the Warriors when playing any MIC competitor.

From tip off it was obvious that it was going to be a very tiring, and up-beat game. The Warriors understood they needed to remain physical and stay mentally focused against the Greyhounds.

"You never want to give a team like Carmel a large lead. We know if we stayed close, anything can happen at the end," Assistant Coach Roger Kirkpatrick said.

Coach Kirkpatrick was filling in for head Coach Scott Heady due to medical issues during the Carmel game.

The game was starting off on the wrong foot for the Warriors, as they trailed the Greyhounds by five points at the end of the first quarter.

The team knew what they had to do to get the job done, so they began to push themselves even harder, and ended the half with a lead and the score set at 31-27.

Carmel came back once again in the third quarter, but that was not going to slow the Warriors down. The score was tied at the end of the third at 46, everyone knew the game could easily go either way. But, the Warriors were bound and determined to come out on top.

There were several lead changes in the fourth alone, with juniors Ed Hazlett and George Cheesebourough both receiving technical fouls.

With only 4.6 seconds left in the game, junior Derrick Spight sprinted down the court and drew a foul from a Greyhound defender. The Warriors were down a point, and Spight knew what he had to do. He made the first shot, and missed the second, sending the game into overtime.

"When I knocked the first one down, I knew it was okay, but then I missed the second one. I just knew we had to beat them in overtime," Spight said.

With less than a minute left in overtime, senior Josh Jones scored a two-point shot, giving the Warriors the lead. Carmel was unable to score on their possession, and junior Jordan Kennedy set the win for the Warriors on his final shot making the score 72-68.

"It was a great win considering the circumstances. Our guys made no excuses and did what they were capable of," Kirkpatrick said.

On the boys senior night they captured another win against state ranked team Evansville Reitz 60-50.

The game energized the team and sent them into Sectionals with high hopes.

Unfortunately, after a hard-fought game and several lead changes, the Warriors failed to defeat Cathedral High School in the first round with a score of 66-67.

NICE SAVE! Junior Keona Bruen attempts to save the ball before it bounces out of bounds in the Warrior's game against the Lawrence North Wildcats. After already playing the Wildcats once, the ladies were prepared for their opponent's game plan and wanted to win a MIC game, but they fell short, 62-61.

striving to follow through

Warriors come close to every MIC opponent and persevere through defeat.

Wtih new head coach David Burton and a new game plan, the ladies were determined to pick up on things and work hard to win games and play together as a team.

The Warriors had four returning starters and six seniors and were ready to take advantage of the leadership.

Unfortunately, the Warriors started off their first game against the Noblesville Millers with a loss. However, the Warriors responded quickly in their second game against the defending state champions, Brebeuf Jesuit.

Not only did the ladies find the teamwork they needed, but they played an intense game on both offense and defense. They didn't give up in the end, and many girls got to contribute to the score.

After their holiday tournamnet, the ladies were ready for the next opponent and rival, the Franklin Central Flashes. Like many games for the ladies, it came down to the last quarter with a tight game.

Senior Alyssa Hunter got a steal and took it all the way for two points to put the Warriors up by one. After playing tough defense, senior Teka Flowers made a key pass to senior Shandi Bray who scored two more points to keep the Warriors ahead, giving them a win, 38-35.

After a few more regular season games, the ladies held a record of 0-7 in the MIC conference, and were ready to take on their last MIC opponent, Center Grove.

In the first half, the ladies stayed motivated. Everything came together for the team, and everyone worked together to keep their lead in the first half. However, after half time the Trojans came out ready to fight back.

The game held a tight score through the fourth quarter when the Warriors committed various turnovers and were forced to foul in order to get possession opportunities. Center Grove stayed strong by hitting big free throws, leaving the Warriors with a loss, 49-59.

Sectionals were next for the ladies. First round for the Warriors was the Cathedral Irish. The Warriors kept the lead until the last two minutes of the game when Cathedral hit two big shots to tie the game up at 50 and went on to take the lead. Although the Warriors tried to keep up, turnovers became a problem and they took a tough loss to end their season, 52-54.

"At times we played great basketball, but we just didn't do the things we needed to at the end to pull out the win," head coach David Burton said.

The ladies learned to persevere through struggles in games and overall had a positive season. Despite the Warriors record of 13 losses, they were in the game during the fourth quarter for 12 of them.

"In the end we pulled together as teammates to do our best," senior Lauren Shepherd said. "But sometimes we just didn't come out on top."

never stop believing

A year for rebuilding proved true for the Warriors after a close Sectional loss.

It was a year for rebuilding, which said a lot for the Warrior wrestling program.

Not only were they a young team, with only two returning varsity seniors, it was also the first year for head coach Matt Schroeder.

Schroeder was an assitant to former head coach Jim Ledbettter for several years and always was actively involved with the Warrior Wrestling Club.

The season record, 27-17, came as no shock to Coach Shroeder.

"The team did about as we expected with the inexperience they had," Schroeder said. "They needed to step up to the next level, and by advancing six to individual Regionals and I think we did just that."

Although six wrestlers advanced to Regionals, the team on the other hand was not quite up for the challenge in front of them in Sectional action this year.

The Warriors placed fourth at the Sectional meet at Franklin Central, losing by only four points to Beech Grove to lose a chance for a bid to Regionals.

Junior Nick Odom and sophomore Michael Johnson-Jones were Sectional Champions, and moved onto the Regional meet with seniors Kyle Willis, Mike Van Skyock, junior Matt Mooreland, and sophomore Quiten Brooks.

All wrestlers competed well on their road to Conseco Fieldhouse, and the two lone Sectional Champions were the two who made it to the individual State meet.

The total attendance of the two-day meet this year was 27,233.

"I thought it would be different and more difficult wrestling in front of the crowd, but once you get out there and start to wrestle, you forget about all the people. It takes most of the pressure away," Odom said.

Odom put out Tri-West sophomore Quaye Bealmear in the first round with a score of 5-2.

Odom moved to the 125-pound weight class just a week before Sectionals.

"I felt proud of what I was able to accomplish due to all the talent in my weight class," Odom said.

The second round held a big challenge for Odom as he wrestled two-time state Champion Joshua Harper from Mishawaka. Odom fell just short of Harper, but was not done yet.

He continued on to the third round were he wrestled John Sims of Mater Dei, but had a close loss 4-2. Odom placed eighth overal in State.

Johnson-Jones got put out first round with a mere two point loss to his opponent.

keeping up in the fast lane

Underclassmen make a big splash this season for the swim teams.

With good preformances from underclassmen this season the Warrior swim teams are looking for even more improvments next season.

"It's only my second year here, so we're still building," Coach Jason Lancaster said. "We got a lot of new freshmen this season and several swimmers from last year returned."

Something new for the Warrior swim team this season was the college meet against their biggest rivals, the Ben Davis Giants.

A college meet consists of several more events that are double what you see in a normal high school line-up. Two hundred yards in backstroke, butterfly, and breaststroke, the 100-yard freestyle, and the 400-yard individual medley are popular college events that have yet to make their way into a high school line up.

"I had had some experience swimming 200 breaststroke, so when I had to swim it did not come as a surprise," junior Preston Walker said. "After swimming one meet where all the distances were doubled, swimming a regular meet after that seemed a lot easier. So it was good practice for us."

The Warriors then had their chance to prepare for the big Sectional meet. In swimming a week before the team's biggest meet of the season, the team begins tapering off yards, which means the swimmers begin doing easier sets. For many swimmers this was their first Sectional meet so they had a lot to prepare for.

Both swim teams had a lot of confidence coming into the Sectional meet because they knew they had trained hard enough to keep up with the top teams. The boys finished fifth over all while the ladies finished seventh.

At the Sectional finals meet the underclassmen were on top of things in all of the events that they competed in. Sophomore Haley Dickey finished fifth in the 200-yard IM with a personal record and placed eleventh overall in 500-yard freestyle.

Freshman Ali Chorpenning also did particularly well considering it was her first Sectional meet. Chorpenning placed sixth in the 200-yard freestyle and ninth in the 500-yard freestyle.

Also placing well was the quartet in the 400-free relay consisting of sophomores Kasey Ferbrache and Dickey, Chorpenning and senior Liz White. The ladies finished fourth overall and only 29 seconds behind the first place finishers.

The boys preformed very well individually this season by finishing fifth overall.

Freshman Andy Chorpenning placed fourth in the 200-yard freestyle and third in the 500-yard freestyle, only 12 seconds behind Franklin Central's Patrick Walters. Sophomore Cameron Lynch placed fourth in his 200-yard IM and in his 100-yard butterfly.

"All-in-all, I am very proud of how all the kids performed this season. We had so many great swims throughout the season," Lancaster said.

just a stroke away

Boys golf team fought throughout season with a young team of six.

The Warrior boys golf team compiled mostly of underclassmen had a great start to their season with an unfortunate turn for the worst at the end.

Head coach Al Darko anticipated early in the season that junior Cody Risser, sophomores Matt Spicuzza, Conner Worley, Allan Keita, and senior Zach Downer, all returning players, to be the key players on the season. Risser and Spicuzza were the top two players on the team.

"I always look forward to the season, and this year I was really hoping we would come out on top more than the year before, and thats what we started doing," Spicuzza said.

The boys started season off well with a win against Speedway and Pike shooting a 151 putting the team 25 strokes ahead of Pike the and 37 strokes ahead of Speedway.

Then the boys teed off in the Ritter Classic finishing third out of eighteen teams. During this match Risser received his first 18-hole individual win shooting a 75.

The next two matches the team competed in were against the Greenfield Cougars and the Ben Davis Giants in which the boys took home two wins.

With County approaching the boys were working hard to prepare for the meet, and the hard work paid off when they placed third out of 16 teams.

In the meet Risser shot a 74 placing him in sixth, Spicuzza shot a 75 placing him in ninth, and Keita shot a 78 placing him in 17th.

The next win came against the Lawrence North Wildcats in which the team shot a 148, 21 strokes under the Wildcats.

The first big loss for the team came against Cathedral, in which the team lost by only three strokes. Luckily the team got their revenge on the Irish in the Franklin Central Invitational in which they placed first out of twenty teams ahead of many including Cathedral. Risser placed sixth in the invitational

Next up was the much anticipated Sectional tournament. The tournament nearly every high school sports team works towards. According to Darko the team were Sectional runners-up the previous year and according to the High School Athletic Association website the last time Warren Central won Sectionals was during the 2004-2005 season three years ago.

Unfortunately, the season came to an abrupt end during Sectional action when the team came in thirteenth out of fourteen teams and only the top three advance on to Regionals.

"It was a good season, and I am glad I was able to particpate with the other guys," Worley said. "Sectionals is always a tough round, but we gave it our best."

second time in a row

Girls work hard to win the sectionals tournament for second year in a row.

With a sensational start to the tennis season, the girls were looking to end it big. After ending the season with a record 15-5 the girls were looking forward to repeating their sectional championship title, and possibly advancing past the regional.

Battling hard at the beginning of the season, the girl's ultimate goal was to demolish the competition and get first in sectionals. This year, for a second year in a row, the girls came out on top and won the sectional title.

For their first round of sectionals, the girls needed to beat Guerin Catholic, which would advance them to the next round to play Lawrence North. Their match against Guerin Catholic turned out to be a simple win with a score of 5-0.

After destroying the Golden Eagles, they only had one team left in their footsteps to the sectional title, Lawrence North.

When round two came up, the Lady Warriors did not know what to expect. Sectionals against the Wildcats would be different from their regular season match against them. In their match earlier in the season, the Wildcats' top player was unable to compete but was now back for sectionals. Although the girls had before beaten the Wildcats 5-0, their entire lineup was different, and each girl would have a different player to compete with.

The girls broke the Wildcats' winning streak by beating them with a score of 4-1 in the sectional. This win advanced them to the regional, where they would play the Greyhounds from Carmel. With such a tough opponent, the girls lost in the regional to end their season.

"Even though we lost in the regional, our team accomplished a lot this year. It was the first time the girls tennis team has consecutively won a sectional title, and we had the best record that we have had in a very long time," junior Katie Poole said.

The boy's season, however, had a different outcome than the girl's. They came out with a record of 8-4, which was better than many of the previous years.

The boys defeated several teams with scores of 5-0 including Perry Meridian. Beating the Falcons this year was a great accomplishment for the boys. The previous year, Perry Meridian had beaten the boys with a score of 1-4.

Another accomplishment for the boys was winning a tough match against Nobleseville with a score of 3-2. Like Perry Meridian, the boys were beaten by Noblesville the previous year with a score of 0-5.

The boys stepped up their game this year, with a new coach and a new lineup. They improved their record and gradually became better players throughout the season.

we are family

Seniors lead the team all season fighting to keep the score close in every game.

With a team of 10 seniors and four stand-out juniors, the Warriors were looking forward to an outstanding season. The team was composed of levelheaded, talented athletes, and Coach Brian Murphy knew this was exactly what the team had to accomplish to get where they needed to be.

"We just need to play aggressively and try to win every game, including county and sectional games," Coach Murphy said.

Despite all the Warrior's efforts they were not able to come out on top during any conference, county, or Sectional play.

The team had games over spring break, losing one game to Carmel by a mere point. During the game senior Erik Fannin went 3-for-4 with two RBI's, but that was still not enough to push the Warriors past the Greyhounds and the final score was 5-6.

"It was satisfying getting that close to beating such a highly ranked team. It would have been more satisfying to win, obviously, but it is just a reminder for us to continue working hard for the rest of the season," Fannin said.

The Warriros earned their first win over Guerin Catholic, winning 9-3. Senior Zach Mulford, the Warriors right fielder, went 2-for-4 and scored twice for Warren. Pitcher Jeremy Pittman earned the win and had five strikeouts.

A pivotal game for the Warriors was against the New Palestine Dragons. The Warriors scored three runs by Pittman, senior Zach May, and junior Matt Hoke. Hoke was walked to first after a wild pitch from the Dragons. But in the mean time, the Dragons had scored five runs of their own.

Kyle Crawford, senior pitcher and catcher, had a chance to tie the game up with his last at bat, with short stop Logan Worley on base. Crawford had a full count and on his last chance he got under the ball just right to send it out of the park, but to everyone's amazement the Dragon's left fielder snagged it just over the fence, ending the game with a score of 3-5.

"I was upset, I can't lie. But, it's just all part of the game. We would have been proud if our player made a catch like that, but just because it was the other team made it so bitter," Crawford said.

The Warriors played the North Central Panthers in the first round of County. The Panthers are a top ranked state team, and the Warriors did their best to keep up with the talent. The team lost by one run with the final score being 11-10. Fannin did his best pitching, and had several strike-outs throughout the game,

"It's always pressure being on the mound, but I love that feeling of helping out my team even if we do not come out on at the end of a game," Fannin said.

The Warriors were able to grow as a team, and became a tight knit family, one Worley said that he was proud to be apart of for his senior year.

Rain or shine

Warriors win a Sectional game for the first time since seniors have been at Warren.

Through all the good times, hard times, and fun times, the ladies grew closer together this year. The ladies fought through the wins and losses all season to prepare for Sectionals. Their ultimate goal being to take home a sectional title.

Since the ladies have not advanced in Sectionals in at least the past four years, the seniors were motivated to pick things up this year and come out with a win. The team prepared every game with pre-game rituals to rid nervousness and stay focused. These exercises geared the ladies up to work together as a team and play smart.

In the first round, the Warriors took on the Lawrence North Wildcats at North Central. It was pouring rain the entire game. Although these conditions made the game more challenging, the ladies kept their intensity up. The score went back and forth the entire game.

The Wildcats scored first in the third inning, but the ladies did not let it discourage them. The Warriors came back and scored in the fourth, but after an error, Lawrence North came back and scored one in the fifth taking the lead.

The Warriors kept fighting hard to take the lead and bring in a first-round Sectional win. In the sixth inning, the Warriors scored two runs bringing the score to 3-2.

Senior Sara Goelz had a one hitter with eight strikeouts and three in a row to close the game for a win.

Overall, the team had a few errors but bounced back from them and made many good plays to make up for their mistake.

"After loosing our first three years in the first round of Sectionals, it felt good to finally advance," senior catcher Caitlin O'Brien said.

Once the Warriors got their golden tickets to the second round of sectionals, the ladies were not taking anything for granted and took the bull by the horns by bringing in the first home run.

Warriors came out on top after a comeback from the Cathedral Irish. The game was all tied up when the lady Warriors took charge. Senior Caitlin O'Brien went 3-3 on the night and scored four runs. Senior Terra Payson had a 3-run homerum to bring up the score. Senior Sara Goelz ended up with a doubled on the night.

In their final round of Sectional play, the Warriors were up aganist the North Central Panthers. Throughout the game Goelz only gave up one hit and had ten strikeouts overall. The Warriors dominated the evening with one to zero run.

Sadly, the Warriors' celebrations came to an end when they lost aganist Noblesville, 1-8 in Regional play.

"We just weren't as focused as we could have," senior Terra Payson said.

make it rain

Warriors smash Franklin Central by 100 points and come out Sectional champs for the sixth time.

The blocks were set and the runners ready. The sky started to twist with clouds of grey and white but the weather wouldn't stop the boys track team from taking care of business.

Opponents ranging from Scecina and New Palestine to Franklin Central lined up for the first event, the 4 x 800 meter relay. Juniors Timothy Bixler, Doug Ellington, Kyle Shickles, and senior Shaun Doerflein lined up for a heated race. The gun fired and Bixler led off. Franklin Central seemed to be the only possible threat to the Warriors towards the ending of the race. Shickles anchored the 4X8 and ended the race with a time of 8:19.65. The close finish left the Warriors placing second to Franklin with time of 8:19.43.

After the preliminaries, freshmen Eric Robinson advanced to the 100 meter dash alongside junior George Cheesebourough for the second event of the rainy night. Both young men blew out the competition and placed first and second respectively with times of 11.40 for Robinson and 11.48 for Cheesebourough.

Seniors Marquis Collins and D'Juan Richardson both participated in the 100 meter dash as well. Once again, the Warriors took both the first and second spot and Richardson took first with a stunning time of 15.06.

After only four events, the competition was clearly being left in the dust with Franklin Central trailing by 30 points. The Warriors did not take that for granted and continued to pursue the goal of a Sectional title.

Senior Mykal Thomas and Junior Cesar Jones both competed in the 200 meter dash and staggered their placement by earning the 2nd and 5th place.

Franklin Central has been notorious in recent years for their distance runners and this put more pressure among Senior Joel Mathews and Junior Ryan Daughtery in the 1600 meter run.

"Even though the weather was really cold wet and rainy, I knew I was expected to win and I took the lead from the beginning. I just tried to hold the front and I had a lot more left than what I expected on the last leg," Mathews said.

Mathews impressed not only the fans but also coaches when he placed first with a time of 4:37.28.

As the events continued, the boys kept sweeping the number one spots.

The 4X100 team consisting of seniors Michael Campbell, Mykal Thomas, Cheesebourough, and Robinson took the first place title with a time of 43.14. Cheesebourough was a new face to the track team this year and learned a lot from teammate and friend Campbell.

"He was like my teacher this year and helped me learn and adapt," Cheesebourough said.

In the end, as the rain was pouring buckets, the team earned a total of 223 points followed by Franklin Central with 102.50 points. The worry was over and the boys had changed history. That was the most points scored since 1926 in Warren Central track history.

Living in the fast lane

Sprinters keep reputation of the Warriors, taking it to the State meet for the third year in a row.

"Tomorrow is never promised" was a phrase on the mind of everyone during the cold, windy night of post-season competition at Shelbyville High School.

The number one mind it was on was junior Ebony Wright. Wright suffered a pulled hamstring during the 100-meter dash finals, forcing her to miss the 200 final, 400 relay and the 1600 relay.

But tears were not the only thing contagious that night, smiles were all around as the Warriors advanced to State competition. Seniors Candyce McGrone and Monteka Flowers were part of that smiling group as they combined for three of the evening's five meet records in leading the currently ranked number two warriors to 104 points and the win.

McGrone the defending state champion in the 100 and 200, set Regional records of 11.70 and 24.58 in the preliminaries of both events, breaking her own mark of 11.93 from the prior year.

Flowers won both the discus and shot put, setting a regional record and personal best of 150 feet, 5 inches in the discus and a season best of 43-3 in the in the shot.

"Coach Taylor gave us an awesome pre-meet speech, and he was just about demanding I throw 150 feet in the discus," Flowers said. "I appreciate how he pushed me."

Other Warriors accompanying them on the state brigade consisted of juniors Qaniah Douglas and Keona Bruen, who placed one and two in the long jump at 16-7 and 16-6, respectively. Douglas was third in the 300 hurdles, and freshman Latisha Martin got third in the 400-meter run. The 3200 -meter relay team placed third as well.

Coach James Taylor said he was upset to lose the points they could have attained with Ebony, but was proud to see the rest of the team step up in their time of need.

"Candyce had a good night considering the cold and wind, Monteka came up big and several others stepped up as well," Taylor said.

The Warriors also sent four girls to New York City for National Scholastic Indoor Championships. The times allowed the Warriors to prepare for the upcoming season.

A down point of the season happened at the County meet where the Warriors came up short of North Central by a mere two and a half points.

"When we compete against teams like North Central, I know that they have been trained to compete and win dual meets, county, etc., but when the time comes for Sectionals, Regionals, and State, they fall behind, and we are the ones who end up on top," Taylor said.

Taylor couldn't have said this better. The Warriors dominated the post season on their way to the State meet at Indiana University.

first place again

The Lady Warrior track team brings home the State title for the third year in a row.

For the third year in a row the Lady Warrior track team brought home the big one. The Lady Warriors became the first, and only, athletic state champions for this school year.

However, it was not easily done. The ladies only came out on top by a mere four points, and came extrememly close to losing it all during the 1600-meter relay. The Warriors led on the track up until the exchange between the first and second leg where the baton was mishandled and took the Warriors out of contention for that race.

The Warriors did not come back and finish the race, which gave North Central, the team then in second place, the chance to take it all. But fortunately the Panthers were not able to place fifth or better, allowing for the Lady Warriors to place first once again.

Candyce McGrone was able to win the 100 and 200-meter dash, the 4 x 100 team of freshmen Brianna Aikens and Brionna Harrison, junior Keona Bruen and McGrone took second place, Qaniah Douglas placed eighth in the long jump, and senior Monteka Flowers placed second in the discus throw, and fourth in the shot put.

McGrone collected her seventh and eight career state titles for her performances in the 100 and 200-meter races, but was not able to capture the ninth due to the results of the 4 x 400 relay.

The boys placed third at the State meet and senior D'Juan Richardson received the Robert S. Hinshaw Mental Attitude Award. He also received a full ride scholarship to the University of Iowa.

Richardson was one of two individual state champions with his performances in the 110 and 300-meter hurdles. He placed first in both races with times of 13.96 and 37.18 respectively.

The other individual State champion was junior Derrick Spight in the high jump. Spight walked away with a jump of 6 feet 11 inches.

"It was such a great feeling to be able to walk away a champion," Spight said. "I couldn't have done it without all the support I was given from my teammates, friends, and most importanatly my parents,"

The 4 x 100 team of Mike Campbell, George Cheeseborough, Mykal Thomas, and Eric Robinson placed seventh, and senior Matthew Webster placed seventh in discus.

After the state meet, McGrone continued on her running career as she travled to the Golden West Championships in Folsom, California.

McGrone won the 100 and 200 meters, and later won both events again at the Midwest Meet of Champions.

Flowers also won the discus throw at the Meet of Champions, and placed third in the shot put.

The list of accolades continues, but the ladies did it again with another State championship.

Sometimes it takes a tragic event to find out who your real freinds are. And that you had more than you knew.

"I was suspicious that something was up but nothing of this magnitude," senior Jeremy Pittman said after receiving a $5,000 check for him and his sister sophomore Larissa Pittman.

This money was raised by Warren Central students to fund the Pittmans' trip to Disney World. The two wanted to take part in a marathon to raise money for the Leukemia/ Lymphoma Society.

This marathon hit close to home because Jeremy and Larissa's father, Don Pittman, was diagnosed with Multiple Myeloma, a rare blood cancer in April of 1999. Unfortunately, Don passed away in August of 2006 due to complications after seven years of treatment.

The brother and sister duo wanted to run the Walt Disney World marathon in their father's memory and for anyone who has been affected by blood cancer. Unfortunately, they were short thousands of dollars of the required $8,000 entry fee, so they went before Student Council, National Honor Society, and their friends asking for spare change. Ms. Janis Gaerte also helped collect money by passing around buckets in her classes.

Jeremy's first period class, Mr. Nick Salemi's independent study, decided to help by designing a white T-shirt with the slogan "Never Settle" printed in dark blue. The slogan was a term used often by Jeremy and Larissa's father in a series of sermons he preached before he passed away.

The students had decided to keep the fundraiser a surprise so they secretly sold the shirts for $10 each for two weeks. The students sold hundreds of shirts and told the buyers not to wear them until December 14.

On December 14, the students presented a check for $5,000 to the Pittmans during first period in Mr. Salemi's room. Larissa and Jeremy's mother, older sister and older brother were all there to be a part of the surprise.

Due to their classmates' fundraising and help from their church's congregation, the Pittmans passed their goal and raised $10,000. The extra money was given to a family in need in another charitable organization. The marathon was held on January 13.

DANCING WITH THE FACULTY

"Everyone has so much spirit and drive. This was by far the most professional group," said senior class advisor Ms. Vikki Widgren about this years Dancing with the Faculty.

In only its second year, Dancing with the Faculty, created from the hit television show "Dancing with the Stars," had the crowd on the edge of their seats and provided an amazing time to go along with it.

The dancing pairs, consisting of either a male or female faculty teacher and a male or female student from the senior class, were very lively throughout the entire event. The dances this year were outstanding and varied from a disco boogie to a cultural Latin fiesta and even a 50's themed swing dance.

This year, the dancing couples were english teacher Mr. Eric Mattingly and Emily Gambino, math teacher Ms. Emily Halter and Joel Mathews, choir director Mr. Todd Hawks and Kristen Cattell, instructional assistant Mr. Henry Jordan and Katie Stevens, choir director Mr. Dustin Podgorski and Sachet Watson, and family and consumer science teacher Ms. Ann Holmes with Devon Dunn.

The winning male contestant was Logan Worley dancing with art instructor Dr. Sally Rice and the winning female contestant was Katie Scott and WPAC assistant Mr. Matt Oskay.

"I had a great time," said winning male contestant Logan Worley after his performance with Dr. Rice. Logan and Dr. Rice danced a disco that scored them a roaring cheer from the crowd.

Dancing with the Faculty was not an event to miss and was talked about weeks after it occured. Seniors thoroughly enjoyed participating and watching the memorable event.

Mr. Dayment

Q. What do you like the most about Warren Central?

A. The best thing about Warren is the diversity among the students and the atmosphere.

I would have to say my favorite thing about being a teacher is helping out with a student's success and achievement.

Q. What do you do to pass the time?

A. When passing the time, I enjoy playing the guitar, following Major League Baseball, and spending time with my family.

Q. If you can remember, what was your favorite part about being in high school?

A. I would say my favorite part was the sports. I played mainly basketball and baseball.

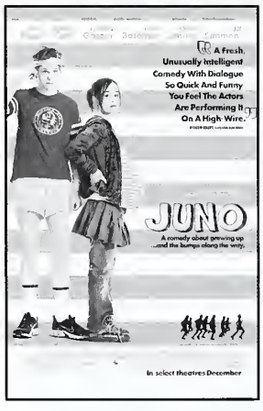
1. Another film that fared well as the Oscars was the much talked about "Juno," winning best original screenplay. The film centers on a teenager's pregnancy and how she deals with it with grace and humor. Diablo Cody, the screen writer who penned the screenplay wasn't always in the profession. What did she do before?



"The Bee Movie" marks the return of Jerry Seinfeld to the entertainment world after an absence after the end of "Seinfeld." For how many seasons was the series on before it ended?

3. Bruce Willis has saved the world time and again in various films from the epic science fiction film "Fifth Element" to the adrenaline pumping "Die Hard" series. However, this uniquely American actor wasn't born in the United States. In which country was he born?

4. He starred in films as diverse as "10 Things I Hate About You," "Cassonova," and "Brokeback Mountain" and will appear in the newest Batman film. What actor passed away untimley this year?

Freshmen vs. Sophomores

It's only a one year difference, but changes are evident.

Freshman

- Run in hallways
- Inexperienced
- In unfamiliar territory
- Freshman sports
- Learn organizational skills

Sophomore

- Take GQE
- Get driver's license
- More responsible
- JV and Varsity Sports
- Take school more seriously

Freshman Frenzy

Nicole Wilson, 9
"Freshmen don't know the school or teachers as well and sophomores are already experienced."

BONUS

→ Ms. Brown

"The difference lies in the transition. Our freshmen spend the year adjusting to new responsibilities, and once this adjustment is made, they can begin making plans for future success, while sophomores have already made adjustments to the new responsibilities."

→ Ingrid Arreola, 10

"I think freshmen are immature since they are just starting high school; they aren't really used to it. They are still in the middle school mind set. I think sophomores are a little bit more mature."

→ Ms. Cummings

"Freshmen know more about the school curriculum and know where to get help. Freshmen are more knowledgeable about how school works because they are new to high school."

→ Shelby Harris, 9

"Freshmen are new to the school and are a little more enthusiastic about being in school because high school is a stage of growing up. Sophomores are used to high school and not that excited about being here."

Quinceanera

(A Celebration Of A Latina Womanhood!)

A quinceanera is a community and family celebrtaion full of tradition and meaning a young girl is escorted into womanhood. The origins of Quinceanra are often attributed to the ancient customs of the Aztecs. Fifteen was the age when many young women left their family to become wives and mothers; a Latina enters her Qinceanera as a child but emerges as a young woman with new responsibilites.

Maritza Honorio

My party Was fantastic! It was one of the most life changing events in my life. I wore a cinderella big puffy chocolate dress. My Main colors of my party were gold, ivory and chocolate. I also had one of the best bands, "Extreme" perform at my quinceanera. Thanks Mami and Papi!

High School Myths

3 Things You Should Have Known

Freshmen Edition

1 Freshmen Friday's sound like a fun day for freshmen, but the myth is that upper classmen trip freshman, throw them in trashcans and knock books out of their hands. This is a common myth to just scare freshman. In reality, upper classmen do not want anything to do with freshman.

2 Yes, Warren is a big school, but you will have plenty of time to get to your classes. There is no need to run in the hallways or carry all of your books around to every class period. Six minutes is plenty of time to not only get from class to class, but also stop at lockers, run to the restroom and buy a soda from the vending machine.

3 Counselors are there for a reason. Freshmen have a tendency to not use what is there for their advantage. Counselors help you decide which classes are better suited for freshmen and they guide freshmen in time management. Counselors are there to teach freshmen what high school is all about.

B: FUNNY- MAN TAD Durham entertains the audience during "Pack the PAC." "Pack the PAC" picked up where Adam Kashner's "Class Clown" left off. C: MIRANDA NEHRIG AND Kadeem Goddard share a moment in the spotlight during "Pride and Prejudice." The play was very successful; all three performances sold out. Q. What makes you different?

A. "My style of clothing. It's sort of preppy, kind of urban, a dash of Bohemian chic, and a sprinkle of bum every now and then."

Q. What's your most embarrassing moment?

A. "One night I was waiting for my mom to pick me up from color gaurd and I was really tired. I saw her silver 2004 Chevy Malibu pull up to the curb and as I reached for the handle I realized that my mother did not have glasses or short hair and I was trying to get into the wrong car. I was totally mortified."

Q. Have you changed more since being in high school?

A. "I am more outgoing and I speak my mind more."

Q. What's on your play list?

A. "Wisin y Yandel, Don Omar, Aventura, Chris Brown, and Aolassa."

Would You Rather. . . .

Students give their input on classic questions from the game.

1. Be stranded on a deserted island by yourself or with someone you hate?

I would rather be stranded with someone I hated because being with anyone is better than than being alone. I might end up not hating them after all. On the other hand, if I was starving, I could just eat him.

-Dominic Atible

2. Have half days everyday or no homework forever?

3. Have one wish granted right now or three in 10 years?

I would rather have three wishes granted in 10 years because if life isn't working out, I can change it drastically.

-Aaron Schroeder

4. Meet an alien or actually travel to outer space?

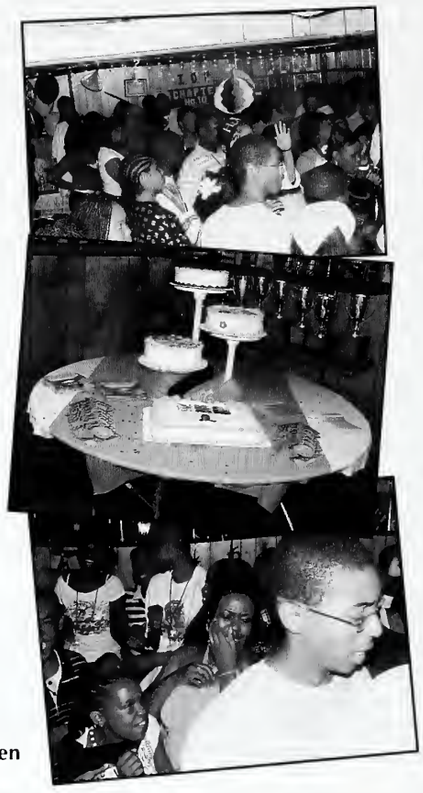
You are invited to My...

Charrise Woods



As Charrise Woods made her entrance in a red corvette she appeared in an elegant and formal pink dress. Before she came everyone had to wait outside until the host came. To be able to go in The American Legions Hall you had to have an invitation and if you were V.I.P you wore the invitation around your neck. After she took pictures with family and friends. She changed into an all white Baby Phat outfit. Then she had two performers that danced for her. After they performed the DJ started to play music from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m. Also for her birthday her parents gave her money. At the end of the day Woods said it was worth it.

These pictures from Charrise Woods' sweet sixteen show guests dancing her four cakes.

Kasey Ferbrache

Kasey Ferbrache celebrated her birthday differently than most people. She and her two best friends headed downtown for a fun day. The first thing she did was go on a carriage ride around the downtown circle. After she roamed around downtown she stopped at the Hard Rock Cafe to grab a bite to eat. Then they went shopping at the Circle Center Mall. Lastly, her and her two bestfriends stayed over night at The Embassy Suite. She also got a car from her parents. Even though Ferbrache didn't have a party she still had the best time of her life.

Sweet Sixteen

Stephanie Demic

Arriving fashionably late to her party Stephanie Demic appeared in a formal black dress. After she made her entrance she changed into a white sports bra and white shorts. The rest of her body was spray painted black. The whole basement was pitch black and all you could see was her white bra and shorts. After her second entrance her and the guest danced from 7 p.m. to 2 a.m. Also for her birthday her parents gave her money. In the end her sweet sixteen was fabulous.

The pictures of Stephanie Demic's party all of the people dancing and enjoying themselves in Stephanie's basement.

Danielle Shoemake

Having her sweet sixteen at Washington Apartments Clubhouse Danielle Shoemake had her sweet sixteen at. Before the party started she had the Clubhouse decorated in pink, black, and silver. After the guests arrived the DJ started to play music. Then during the party they had party contests such as best dancers. They danced from 8 p.m. to 12 a.m. The party got shut down early because they said that they were too loud. Her parents also got her money and clothes. Even though it didn't last all night she still had the best time ever.

Mike's Car Wash

THE DIRTIEST PART of working at Mike's Express Car Wash would have to be shoveling dirt and debris out of the pit. Danielle Everts lifts the grate off of the tunnel floor before getting the shovels. This is not a job the employees of Mike's Car Wash have to do often, but it is never a task anyone, even the managers, look forward to. Completing the pit cleaning always creates a moment for celebration.

TRICKS OF THE TRADE

MIKE'S EXPRESS CAR Wash has the goal of wowing every customer. That is one reason why the wow star, featured below, was created. It ensures an employee is visible to customers at all times and ready to work.

MIKE'S WANTS THE young children to feel welcome. That is why there are stuffed characters, such as Sponge Bob, scattered throughout the locations. Windows are also decorated with familiar characters.

ADVERTISMENT IS A key element to any business. Mike's Car Wash has signs that always display their latest deals. Customers an also easily see the price and wash menu, as well as the "Early Bird" wash savings.

DIRTY JOBS

STORY/DESIGN BY DANIELLE EVERTS

Every day many students leave school and go to work. They work at fast food restaurants or grocery stores, but there are a select few that have dirty jobs.

Senior Danielle Everts works an average of five days a week at Mike's Express Car Wash. At first, the job may not seem too dirty, but what many don't know that Mike's employees have to clean up the tunnel after running hundreds of cars. All of that dirt has to go somewhere, and it is up to the Mike's associates to clean it up.

They scrub the walls and spray the floors. Sometimes they even have to shovel leftover dirt from below the grates, what they call the pit.

"The worst part for me would have to be the winter because I'm not a cold-weather person at all. The water freezes quickly to your clothes, but it's impossible to not get wet at a car wash."

For Emily Gibson, getting dirty is a totally different process. She watches children at YMCA several days a week. Taking care of children can be a handful when watching as many as she does.

"For $6.46 an hour I have to clean up blood, puke, and change diapers," Emily said when asked what the worst part of her job was. "Working with little kids is the worst part of my job: they cry really loudly, and are hard to take care of because they are so little."

These are just two dirty jobs out of hundreds. There are so many teens that work, but now they have a few good reasons to be thankful for the not-so-dirty jobs they have.

Ransburg YMCA

EMILY GIBSON HOLDS up the bag of trash she just collected to take out. She works with children several times a week, changing diapers and cleaning up their messes. Small children are the worst, according to Emily, because they are so small and hard to keep up with. Overall, working with children is still rewarding YMCA employees say.

BOLD FACED LIARS

Eight students. Two bands. One shared passion for music.

THE BOYS OF Bold Faced Liars pose for their promotional picture.

With musical backgrounds stemming from an array of instruments, it's no mystery that the boys of Bold Faced Liars have joined to form a band whose music doesn't stick to one genre.

"We love variety, and we'll play anything from indie to rap," said Marco Boulais, vocalist for the band.

The boys passion for music began when they were young. Boulais and drummer Christian Wilson both played piano. Boulais also played viola for six years. Guitarist Shane Griffin played clarenet in the fifth grade.

The trio gathered in Wilson's basement once a week for practice. First they wrote their music and then later added their lyrics.

After drinking a Mountain Dew or five, the boys were ready to perform. They played any chance they got and often performed at parties for their friends. Many of their fans liked Bold Faced Liar's song "Cars", but the trio likes to play "Just Say No", inspired by Warren Central's own Mr. Greenlee.

"We'd love to have the same success as Cher," said Griffin with a laugh, and although that's a lot to live up to the band does plan on keeping the dream alive.

CHRISTIAN WILSON KEEPS a strong beat while playing their song Cars.

GUITARISTS SHANE GRIFFIN and Marco Boulais simultaneously rock out during the breakdown of a song.

IDEAL IMPACT

After six different band names and a two year search for a bassist, the boys of Ideal Impact put their heads together and let their creative juices flow.

Since middle school the group has matured from once a month practices to once a week practices. Originally the group was formed by guitarists Andrew Mclaren and Aaron Stroude, drummer Chuck Alexander and vocalist Kevin Farley. Then during their freshman year Tad Durham was added to the mix as their bassist.

The group planned to hold weekly practices and after putting music to their lyrics, a band name was all they needed. It had changed many times during middle school and they needed something to stick. "I used a name generator I found on Google," Mclaren said. "It came up with some weird ones, but we voted out of the best five."

Ideal Impact was ready to rock.

"We wanted to be different from other high school bands and play more classic rock then be classified as an "emo band," Stroude stated.

Although they weren't booking shows every weekend the band was content with playing at their friends parties and are hoping to buy some recording equipment and make a demo.

Before hitting the stage to play, the group released their nervous energy by jumping and pacing the room. Their favorite songs to play are "End of Time" and "Headed Home". Although, the fan- favorite song was "Hey".

"Our big goal is to sell out Madison Square Garden and have a bakery on the side," Stroude said humerously.

Even if their goal may seem far fetched, Ideal Impact always acheived their goal of putting on an energetic show.

THE BOYS SHOW spirit as they jump for joy in their promotional picture

THE BOYS PUT intensity into their music playing.

IDEAL IMAPACT ARE always full of energy on stage.

Top 09 Things To Do Before Graduation

1. Go to prom. Prom is one of the most memorable high school experiences, and the pictures are worth a thousand words. Go with a date or just friends regardless, it will be a blast.

2. Participate in all the senior events. Senior week, senior olympics and dancing with the faculty are fun and hilarious. What is better than competing and laughing with your friends?

3. Try out for a school play or musical. You are only young once, and high school is basically your last time to just try things for fun. Whether you make it or not, it is a good experience to have before going into the real world.

4. Try out a new activity or club. Trying things that you wouldn't typically be involved with helps you figure out what you are good at and what is not your thing. You will experience new people and new roles which will help you in the long run.

2. Pie-themed shows were a sub-trend in 2007 on the big and small screen with "Sweeny Todd" and "My Blueberry Nights." What magical show about a pie maker and his girlfriend Chuck became a surprise hit last year?

3. "Gossip Girl," the hot new TV show based on the best-selling novels by Cessily Von Zegner, stars a collection of some of the hottest up- and-coming stars playing a collection of rich New York socialites. What show did the producers of Gossip Girl produce recently?

4. In it's second season, "Heroes" has become a must see phenomenon despite an extremely convoluted plot line and numerous characters, flashbacks, and dream sequences. One of the characters, Hiro, can time travel. What is the name of Hiro's waitress friend?

Health Crazy? What do you eat?

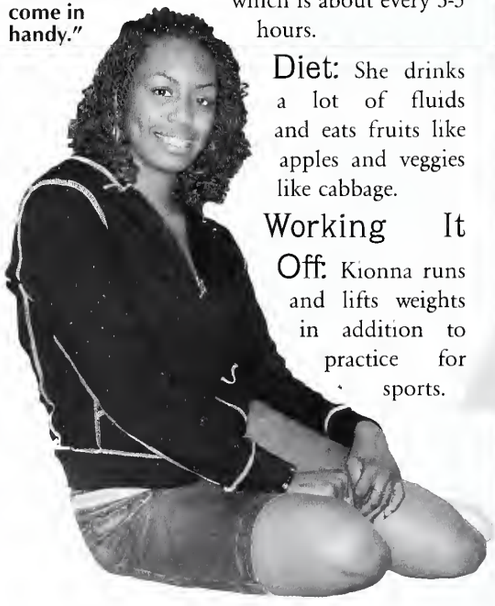
Kionna Bruen

ON THE TOPIC of all the diet plans advertized today, Kionna says, "It could come in handy."

Diet Plan: No plan. Kionna eats small meals when she's hungry, which is about every 3-5 hours.

Diet: She drinks a lot of fluids and eats fruits like apples and veggies like cabbage.

Working It Off: Kionna runs and lifts weights in addition to practice for sports.



Warren Warriors really have a lot to choose from when it comes to what to eat, but do they always choose what's right? In 2003, the National Coalition for a Healthy America was established and began raising awareness about growing obesity problems in America. Over 64 percent of American adults are overweight or obese, according to the Obesity Society website. Now, the cafeteria food in WCHS has undergone an overhaul to provide the healthier choices today's society demands. With all these meals planned for them, are Warren Warriors paying attention to what they eat?

Chartwells, the company that plans the Warren cafeterias' meals, plans them by using the standards set by the National School Lunch and Breakfast Program and the Dietary Guildline for Americans. According to Chartwells, many of their products and snacks contain zero trans fats and have no margarines or shortenings. They've also changed the recipes on many of the foods to make them healthier, such as the cookies, which now have zero trans fats, and the pizza, which has whole-grain crust and low-fat cheese.

There are countless kinds of diets available and many students may not pay attention to what they eat. But, Warriors are often more aware of what they consume than many think.

Shane Urton

ON THE TOPIC of all the diet plans advertized today, Shane says, "Let people choose their own plans; let them choose what's best for them."

Diet Plan: No plan. Shane watches what he eats by counting calories.

Diet: He trys to eat healthy and make his own meals like a chicken sandwich and a fruit.

WorkingItOff: Shane runs regularly and and lifts weights two or three times a week.

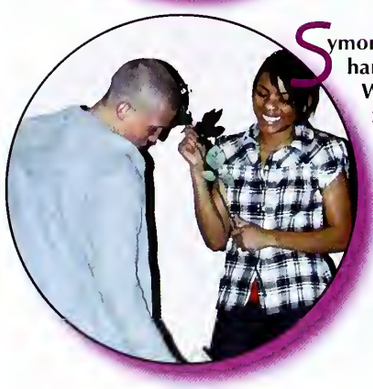
Bachelor/Bachelorette Auction

Going to the highest bidder for a good cause

Senior Jeremy Pittman pays fellow Senior Kristen Catell the money he paid for Melinda Kashner. Melinda Kashner originally went for $42, but when Samantha Barger was bought for $43 Jeremy went back and paid two more dollars so that Melinda would be the highest bid.

Seniors Teka Flowers and Angelina Hoff pose together after the auction. Angelina bought Teka for $16. Girls bidding on their friends seemed to be a common trend this year since there seemed to be a shortage of guys.



Symone Meriwether waits to hand her rose to buyer Chaz Wagner. Chaz bought Symone for $38 making her the third highest bid of the night. The bids started off slow, but as the night went on the bids became higher.

Seniors Logan Worley, Ashley Peek, Shivaugh Abbot, Jarrin Forte, Symone Meriwether, and Josh Jones line up before the auction begins. Although turnout was smaller than in previous years, the Bachelor/Bachelorette Auction still raised an estimated $400. Jeff Williams received the highest bid of the guys which was $31. The auction originated as a way to raise money for the niece of Barb Huffman, who worked in Warren's cafeteria. Huffman's niece was diagnosed with a brain tumor and due to experimental treatment she was faced with large medical bills. Today, the auction's proceeds are raised to benefit the WillPower organization.

You know you are a '90s kid if....

Think back to when we were younger before there were iPods, Myspace, PS2 or X-Box. Think back to the toys, drinks, shows and entertainment

You remember reading and collecting the entire Goosebumps collection. You've gotten creeped out by "Are You Afraid of the Dark" collection.

You remember watching Hey Arnold, Rugrats, The Fresh Prince of Bel Air, The Big Comfy Couch, Doug, Wishbone, Bill Nye the Science Guy

You drank Kool Aid and Sqeeze It. McDonalds Happy Meals were the choice for dinner every night

You remember when it was worth getting up on Saturday mornings to watch cartoons like the Ninja Turtles. You knew that Kimberly and Tommy from the Power Rangers were meant to be together .

The Chicago Bulls were the best team ever. You played tag, hide and seek, kickball, dodgeball, hopscotch, and red light, green light.

You remember the hot wheel craze. You had at least one Tamagotchi, GigaPet or Nano and took it everywhere.

Senior Class

To the Senior Class of 2008:

Now ends this chapter of our lives. The memories of these past four years are just the beginning of the many memories you will make. Take pride in yourself, and keep your eyes on the prize of success.

Best Wishes,
The Senior Class Officers

To the Class of 2008:

Life is not a rehearsal, so live each day to the fullest. Remember that true success is not measured by money, titles, fancy cars, or big houses, but in the lives of those that you touch. Someone once said, "All that we send into the lives of others comes back into your own." Share your love and laughter with those around you, and you will find success.

It is my sincere wish that your experiences here at Warren have prepared you to take on the new experiences that you will encounter in your lives, and the memories you made will stay with you for a lifetime.

Congratulations to each of you.

Love,
Ms. Widgren

In the end...

The changes that came with the 2007-2008 school year were ultimately a success. The direction that new Principal Rich Shepler took the school in helped out in academics, discipline, and community involvment. The turns of the year brought highs, with three state championships, and adjustments, with many new rules. This year was the turning-point of Warren and set the stage for many years to come.

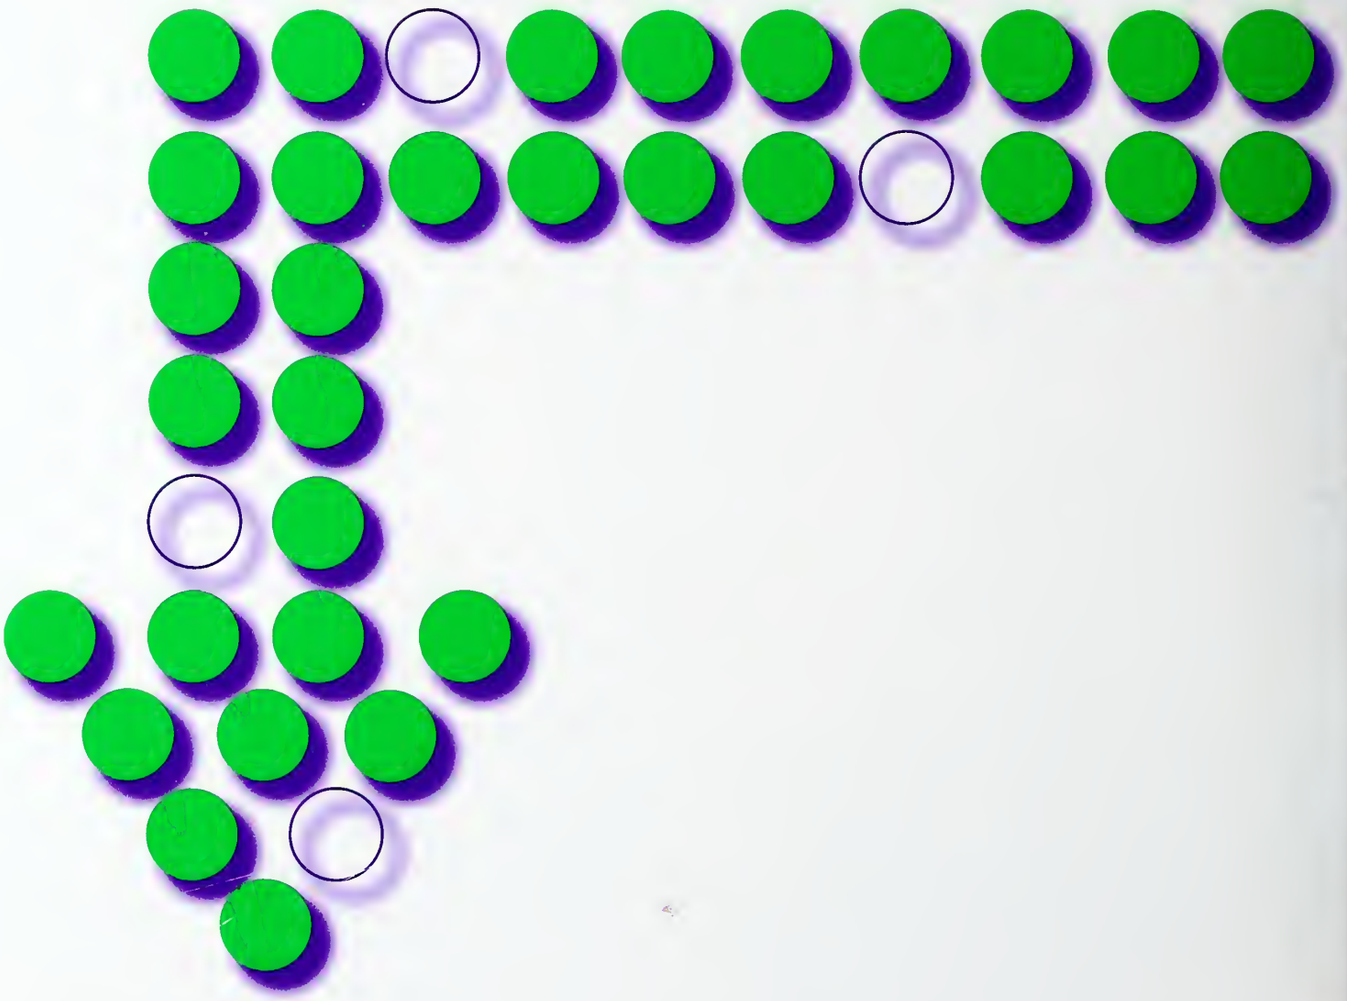
Will Power was a community outreach that was held in April and the event turned out almost 2,000 of participants. Speech Team took home a well-earned state championship after two coaches stepped down and another stepped up. Girl's Track won their third state title.

colophon

At 240 pages, the 2008 Warren Wigwam yearbook was full of changes for the school as students and staff adjusted to a new principal and new policies. Herff Jones printed 650 copies of the 71st volume of the Wigwam. Yearbooks were sold at an "early-bird" price of $40, a regular price of $45 and a final price of $50 in the late sale. Cathy Wines was the Herff Jones representative. Mark Haab served as the yearbook advisor and Publication director. Rich Shepler was the principal. Courtney Sholar served as yearbook editor-in-chief and Emily Brown was the associate editor. The book was printed on 80 pound matte paper and all page layouts were created with Adobe InDesign and Photoshop software and designed by the Wigwam Staff using Macintosh G4 and eMac computers. For the third year senior pictures were printed in color and senior ads were offered in color.

Photography-
Most photos were taken by staff photographers using a Nikon D100, Nikon D80, Minolta Dimage 7, and Nikon Coolpix 5700. Prestige, our official school photographer, provided sports group pictures and some special event coverage.

Typography-
Headline and caption fonts were from the Opus family. Accent fonts were Frank. Body copy was set in the Garamond family 10 point.

Cover-
The cover was designed by the editors and staff members. Drawing from trends in magazines they read, the staff choose circles and arrows to symbolize the changes. Colors were also taked from current magazines.


Workshops-
Students attended Ball State University Summer Workshops, Ball State's J-Day, and the Indiana High School Press Association State Convention at Franklin College where the 2007 Wigwam was a Hoosier Star Finalist.
